THE LAW'S DELAY

Is Aiding Niedringhaus at St. Louis.

Imported Labor Cases to be Investigated.

The Steel Workers Taking Vigorous Action.

They Propose to Protect the Workingman's Rights.

Honest Toilers, Thrown Out of Work by the McKinley Bill Beneficiaries, Do Not Intend to Submit Without a Strong Protest.

St. Louis, Oct. 26.—The announcement that Ivory lodge, Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, had asked United States District Attorney Reynolds to present to the grand jury the testimony of four of the Welshmen imported by the St. Louis company to take the place of the strikers [illegible] considerable comment in poli[illegible] labor circles. The names of t[illegible] Welshmen are Philip Mason and [illegible] two sons, Frank and James, and Charles Terry.

The statements of these men differ but slightly from that made by the spokesman for the first batch of 11 Welshmen about two months ago to a reporter. In brief they are to the effect that Superintendent Wm. Harris of the Nedringhaus works visited them in Wales and told them that they could find work in the rolling mills of the St. Louis Stamping company. Superintendent Harris promised them that they would receive two and one-half times the wages they earned in Wales in St. Louis. They claim to have paid their own way across, and, upon arriving in New York, according to the instructions of Mr. Harris, called upon "General" Osborne, the agent in New York of the St. Louis Stampng company. They at once placed their signatures to contracts to work for the St. Louis Stamping company and were furnished with transportation to St. Louis. The men further claim that they were assured by both Harris and Osborne that there were no labor troubles in the St. Louis Stamping company's mills.

It is hinted, however, that the men, if taken before the grand jury and placed under oath, would tell a different story—one which they do not care to make public, except to the proper officials. This would be to the effect that they had a very distinct verbal contract with Superintendent Harris before they left Wales.

It is also stated that John Barnes, one of the first lot of imported laborers, who is now working at Pittsburg, Pa., has in his possession a letter written to him when living in Swansea, South Wales, stating the offers of Messrs. Niedringhaus and that this letter will be placed in evidence before the grand jury if the opportunity is given.

The investigation of the Niedringhaus contract labor importations by the grand jury was a favorite theme for conversation about the Federal building yesterday. Speculation as to what would be the result could be heard on all sides.

Mr. Henry L. Waeker was seen by a reporter. He was formerly connected with the state labor bureau, but in the Niedringhaus matters appears to be acting "on his own hook." He said that he had worked up the case of these imported workmen and had plenty of evidence to make a case. He said he went to Mr. Reynolds, the United States District Attorney, and was "given a cold shoulder."

Then he said he would present the matter to the foreman or some member of the grand jury. He called on Mr. Reynolds again and was given quite a different reception. In fact, he was, he claims, told to prepare a statement of the case, and the District Attorney promised to present it to the grand jury. This statement, he said, he prepared most carefully from absolutely correct data and presented it to Mr. Reynolds. As this statement differs in some material points from the printed history of the case, the substance of it is given. He says:

"The eleven English laborers (not Welshmen, as has been erroneously stated,) which Mr. Niedringhaus imported last July, were received at the Union depot by representatives of Mr. Niedringhaus and conveyed to the house previously rented and prepared for them by Bob Wilkes, foreman of Mr. Niedringhaus' new tin-shop, who was imported last spring.

"Mrs. Wilkes, against her will, was made boarding-house keeper for these eleven men by Mr. Niedringhaus. Mr. Niedringhaus, and not the Ivory lodge, as has been stated, has paid the board of these men at the rate of $5 a week each ever since they came here.

"Not only this, but he has given them pocket money at the rate of $3 a week. The lodge contributed very little to them, only occasionally giving them a dollar a week each.

"On Friday, October 9, Mr. Niedringhaus having been slow in his weekly payment, a committee of the newly imported men, headed by John Barnes, waited upon Mr. Niedringhaus to ask him for the payment of their weekly allowances.

"They found him in an ill humor, and, instead of complying with their demands, he called them 'a lot of loafers,' and told them unless they went to work he would no longer pay their board and they could look out for themselves.

"They felt very much aggrieved by Mr. Niedringhaus' harsh language, and on the following day addressed him a letter threatening to tell the story as to how they were induced to come to this country. It seems this letter had some effect, for Mr. Niedringhaus did not, as he threatened, discontinue paying their board. None of the men have been back to Mr. Niedringhaus since, nor will they go back till they have assurance of civil treatment.

"These 11 men prior to coming here were kept in New York for some time and entertained in royal style by a firm whose card reads: "American Statistical Protection Bureau, 64 Pine street." Who they are or what their business I do not know further than this card.

"This treatment of these men has naturally made them very hostile to Mr. Niedringhaus, and they will undoubtedly tell a true story when they are brought before the grand jury. He will have a hard time in showing that he comes under the exception of the law allowing the importation of workmen for new industries, for of the 15 imported men there are only four who are in any sense skilled laborers and give their respective trades as tin man, tin washer and tin dipper. Tin plate, you must know, differs from block sheet-iron only as far as it is covered with a coat of tin.

"The covering of sheet-iron with tin is a new trade in this country, and is done by tin washers and tin dippers. The sheet-iron is pickled in acid to take off the scales, then it is dipped in melted tin for 10 minutes, rolled out and is ready for use.

"This part of Mr. Neidringhaus' work is, as I said, a new trade in this country, but the rolling of sheet-iron, for which these men were to be principally used, is an old established trade followed by hundreds of men in this country who would be glad to find employment, and here in this city to-day are 90 skilled iron and steel workers out of employment ever since July 1, when they were locked out by Mr. Neidringhaus because they refused to sever their connection with the Ivory lodge."

NEW STEEL CRUISERS.

Four Men-of-War Soon To Be Launched.

Washington, Oct. 26.—The navy department has been informed that the 2,000-ton cruiser No. 10, which is building at the Columbian Iron works, Baltimore, Md., will be ready for launching during the first week in November. Her sister ship, No. 9, will also be ready a few weeks later.

Two other ships will also get in the water before the close of the year—the 3,000 ton cruiser Raleigh, building at Norfolk, and the 3,100 ton cruiser, the New York, which the Cramps, of Philadelphia, are constructing. These latter vessels will be ready for launching about December 1.

Naval Constructor Bowles was summoned to the navy department to consult with the secretary in regard to expediting the work on the Dolphin, which is being fitted out at the Norfolk navy yard as a despatch and wreck destroying vessel to succeed the Despatch. A number of changes previously contemplated have been postponed in order that she may soon be put into service. The order for the construction of a new cabin for the accommodation of the president or other distinguished men was cancelled some time ago. Mr. Bowles promised to have the Dolphin ready for sea within a month.

MORE TROUBLE IN STORE.

Paris, Oct. 26.—M. Perivier, who is a strict Catholic, and president of the court that is to try the archbishop of Aix, refuses to sit with the rest of the court on such a trial.

Several proposed pilgrimages have been given up, owing to the scene which followed an insult, in the Pantheon, to the memory of Victor Emmanuel.

HE'S A DON BAMBULA.

Vienna, Oct. 26.—It is reported that King Humbert, of Italy, will shortly visit St. Petersburg to arrange a marriage between the prince of Naples and a Russian grand duchess. There is no secret about the difficulty of getting a wife for the prince among the Roman Catholic royalties of Europe.

THE OUTLOOK IS BRIGHT.

Every Indication of Big Democratic Gains.

The Farmers Will Vote for Jimmie Campbell.

Cheering News for the Democracy—Stewart Making a Grand Canvass in His District—General Mention.

Fremont, Oct. 26.—(Special)—A meeting of the democratic central committee has been held, and the report of the canvassers for the townships completed, nearly half of the county, indicate a democratic increase in the majority of from 200 to 300.

A large number of former republicans were reported who will vote for Campbell and the straight people's party ticket for the balance.

No disaffection could be located, and the committee without exception reported more general satisfaction with the county ticket than has been known before in years. The democrats of Sandusky county are united and enthusiastic.

Saturday evening the largest political meeting ever held in Gibsonburg was addressed by Hon. L. Steward and Mr. Aldrich in the opera house. A great amount of enthusiasm was manifested, and a big democratic gain is promised in this the oil center of Sandusky county. A republican meeting was held the same evening at Lindsey, but the attendance was small.

A large number of letters have been received by democratic ex-soldiers here from Candidate Van Horn begging them to vote for him on the soldier plea. The veterans here realize that there is no issue which involves them in the election of a senator from this district. The republicans are working the soldier racket so hard that a number of the younger voters of the party, who do the hard work and are always set aside by their party whenever a soldier comes up to claim anything, are becoming disgusted, and will vote for the young men's candidate, H. L. Stewart.

Mr. Petty, the editor of the Fremont Daily News, a bright and rising young man, was candidate for the republican nomination, but inadvertently admitted that he was an admirer of Sherman.

Jim Lucky, who rants like a mad bull at the very name of Sherman, made up a combination with I. F. Mack, who was engineering the soldier racket, to slaughter young Petty in the convention.

While holding out assurances to their victim that everything was all right, on the day of the convention Van Horn was sprung as a candidate, and without the solid support of his own county, nominated.

Van Horn's nomination is known to be a death-to-Sherman move.

PALMER IN WASHINGTON.

The Illinois Senator on the Issues of the Day.

Hill Cannot Afford to See Flower Defeated in New York—Cleveland a Man of the Masses.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Gen. John M. Palmer, the new democratic senator from Illinois, has arrived in Washington and in an interview he expressed himself freely on the political situation. He said it appeared to him beyond question that the democrats would carry Iowa, and success in that state would put another presidential or vice-presidential candidate in the field. The democacy, he said, could do a great many more foolish things than nominate Gov. Boies whom he described as a man of great intellectuality. Gen. Palmer said he thought Gov. Russell would be a candidate for the vice-presidency if he were elected in Massachusetts.

"I find a disposition in some quarters," said Gen. Palmer, "to suspect Gov. Hill of a lack of sincerity in desiring Mr. Flower's election. If Mr. Flower, with all the patronage and the machinery of the state under the control of Gov. Hill, is not elected, it seems to me that it will require a great deal of self-abnegation on the part of Gov. Hill to make the democrats believe that he was not in some sense responsible."

"The election of Flower," added Gen. Palmer, "would bring Gov. Hill to the senate with a great deal more prestige resulting from demonstrated power than he could hope for from defeat. In the latter event Hill could not be considered in the light of a candidate for the presidency."

Cleveland, Gen. Palmer described as a man of the masses everywhere. He was inclined to think the feeling for Blaine was a great deal on the surface. The president, he said, had broadened much since he had been in the white-house and had demonstrated more ability than was generally supposed he possessed.

He thought free coinage would not cut much of a figure in Illinois because the people did not quite understand the question and he said he regarded the carrying of Illinois by the democrats in 1892 as a probability.

A CHANGE OF HEART.

Fulton County Farmers Studying Protection.

They Have Wool to Sell and Woolens to Buy,

And They Are Beginning to See that McKinley's "Protection" is Only Another Term for Financial Hypnotism.

Fayette, O., Oct. 26.—(Special)—If this political campaign continues much longer there will be a perfect stampede of the republicans in this corner of the state.

Never has there been such an advancement in political education as there has been this fall.

Democrats and republicans alike have been studying their little lessons and much has been accomplished.

The people have been benefited; the state has been benefited; the world has been benefited.

This county (Fulton) is, as you know, very strongly republican. Heretofore a nomination was an election. This year the people are witnessing the remarkable spectacle of the republican candidate for representative begging democrats not to work against him! Begging democrats to vote for him! And (can one believe it?) intimating through his representatives a trade of McKinley (think of it) for votes for him! How are the mighty fallen!

Mr. Ely is an excellent man—in many respects—but his thirst for office has so disgusted his political friends all over the county, that his chances for election this fall are, to say the least, problematical.

He has made himself believe that he is a born officer. That he should have gone to the legislature years ago by rights; that his great talents as a statesman have been ignored to elevate such men as C. K. Allen, Albert Dego and Dr. Rorick.

He wants the office—wants it bad—even at the eleventh hour. He may get it—but he is frightened.

Meanwhile his opponent, Dr. Allen, enjoys the situation hugely and "pursues the even tenor of his way"—vigilant, but not particularly demonstrative.

Such are local matters.

But the undercurrent is strong in regard to state matters. People are beginning to understand more and more about the meaning and tendency of "protection."

Protection is a good word. It has a soothing effect. It is an anesthetic. People have relied on it to cure all their ills and soothe all their pains.

But they are waking up to the fact that they have been drugged!

Among the many demonstrators of this fact are the wool buyers and the clothing merchants.

Our farmers not only have wool to sell, but they have woolen goods to buy. They are receiving object lessons in political economy. They are growing, and growing toward the fact that a protective tariff is not only false as an economic policy, but wrong in the nature of things.

TOOK A BLACK WIFE.

A Massachusetts Farmer Startles His Neighbors.

Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 26.—Much excitement has been created at Groveland by the announcement of the marriage of Wm. Edwards, a prominent and respectable citizen, to Mrs. Louise Betiers, a colored widow.

The ceremony was performed by an Episcopal clergyman on Thursday evening, but the facts only became known Sunday. The bridegroom is 65 years old, and a landscape gardener by occupation; the bride is a buxom colored woman, a native of Baltimore, Md., and has been a widow several years.

WONDERFUL ENGINEERING.

A Proposition to Give Cleveland Good Water.

A Company is Ready to Build a Steel Tunnel Two and a Half Miles Long and Then Sink It.

Cleveland, Oct. 26.—Mr. R. Powell entertained the board of control with a description of the plans for the construction of an iron tunnel two and a half miles into the lake. The tunnel would be built of steel, one-half inch thick, in sections 1,000 feet in length and 8 1-2 feet in diameter. Bulkheads would be put in at each joint. Each section would be filled with air and could be floated out to the place where it is necessary to sink it. All the sections would be joined together before they are sunk by men working on rafts. The entire length of two and a half miles would be sunk in a solid piece by opening the manholes and pulling out the bulkheads. The manholes would then be closed by a mechanical contrivance.

"How much would it cost?" asked Mayor Rose.

"About 50 per cent. of the cost of the brick tunnel," answered Mr. Powell.

Engineer Force said that the greatest difficulty would be in sinking the sections all together, and Gen. Meyer predicted that the waves would smash the pipe to pieces.

"That is our business," said Mr. Powell. "If we can't do it, why, then, we don't know our business. I say we can do it. Of course such a great length of pipe as this has never been sunken before but there is no reason why it cannot be done. The company assumes all responsibility and will not ask the city for a cent until the tunnel is sunk, connected and tested and found to be all right. If you want pure water from two and a half miles out we can get it to you within four months. By the old process it would take four years."

TO SAVE THE BANK.

A Novel Proposition Made by Superintendent Preston.

Kingston, N. Y., Oct. 26.—A statement has been issued by C. M. Preston, superintendent of banking in regard to the Ulster county savings institution. The plan put forth by him to save the bank is to persuade depositors to let their money remain in the institution for two years without interest, at the end of which time they shall get it in full, while those who withdraw their deposits will have them scaled down 5 per cent.

ELLWOOD'S TRIAL.

It Has Again Been Postponed in the East.

Witnesses from Many States Will Be Required to Convict This Slippery Fellow.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 26.—The trial of the famous Ohio masked burglar, George Ellwood, for burglary in this city, was to have come off Tuesday next, but to-day, on the plea that the prisoner had all his money temporarily locked up and could not reach it, the case was postponed until the last of the term by order of the supreme bench.

At the trial there will be witnesses from Worcester, Albany, Hartford, Boston and Ohio. Several officers from other states will be on hand ready to fight for the custody of Ellwood if he gets off here, especially the warden of the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus, O.

THE NAVY AT THE FAIR.

The "Brick Ship" Will Be Completed by Next September.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Capt. R. W. Meade, representing the navy department on the government board of control for the world's fair, says that the work of building the "brick ship" that is to constitute the main feature of the naval display in Chicago is well under way and will undoubtedly be completed by next September.

Considerable unexpected expense has been incurred by the construction of a large drainage tank under the ship in accordance with the rules of the local directory; but by winter the structure will be far enough advanced to enable the contractor to put up a temporary roof and work inside.

The slowness on the part of the navy department in procuring the necessary equipment for the ship has led some private parties to offer to supply it, which offers, however, have not been accepted. Another form that has been held in abeyance is that of an electric supply firm to equip the vessel with a complete lighting and power plant.

The new torpedo boat to be built at Dubuque will be taken to Chicago and placed on exhibition during the fair.

THE PANTHEON AFFAIR.

Rome, Oct. 26.—The pope has written a letter to the archbishop of Aix in which he says that the authors of the recent outrages at the Pantheon indulged in every possible license. They profaned the church, heaped insults upon the pontiff and shamefully maltreated the French pilgrims. In concluding his letter, the pope expresses the hope that the unfortunate incident will not lead to further trouble.

WILL NOT CONTEST.

London, Oct. 26.—The Parnellites have decided not to name a candidate to contest North Kilkenny against Michael Davitt.

MURDERED BY A STRANGER.

Unknown Persons Will Walk Hereafter.

A Farmer Befriends a Wayfarer and is Killed in Return for His Kindness.

Waterbury, Conn., Oct. 26.—James Briordy, an aged farmer, was found Thursday night lying unconscious in the underbrush near the Naugutuck turnpike.

His skull was crushed and he was in a sadly demoralized condition. He was taken to the home of John Foley, near by, where he, after recovering consciousness, said that while riding along the turnpike Thursday night, he was accosted by a stranger who got in his wagon to ride to Waterbury.

The stranger induced Briordy to take a drink of whisky. Soon after drinking Briordy says he lost all consciousness and was knocked out of the wagon by the stranger who struck him with some blunt instrument. Briordy died last night from the effect of the wounds received.

MARY IS HAPPY.

New York, Oct. 26.—Dr. Hamilton Griffin, father of Mrs. Mary Anderson-Navarro, who arrived in this city last night on the Etruria, says that Mrs. Navarro is living happily at her home in Kent, England, and has no desire to return to the stage.

AMERICANS NOT KILLED.

A Denial of the Story from Mexico.

The Persons Shot Were Mexicans Who Were Executed for Desertion.

New York, Oct. 26.—A special to the Herald from Washington says the report that two American citizens, Juan Bazan and Jose Angelvera, were shot by order of General Garcia on the Mexican border, is discredited at the state department.

Word was received last Friday of the execution of four Mexicans for desertion, but there was no intimation that any of them were American citizens.

No word has been received from Consul Richardson on the subject, and if he is, as reported, making an investigation of the alleged shooting, he is doing so on his own hook, as he has not received any instructions from the state department in the matter.

Minister Romero does not credit the story.

DUTY ON SILVER.

It is Causing Much Excitement in Mining Circles.

Monterey, Mex., Oct. 26.—The circular issued by the chief customs officers regarding the export duty on silver is causing much excitement in mining circles. Eight thousand bars of bullion are awaiting the result of the instructions contained in the circular with the apparent alternative of having to pay $8,000 for the assay of the same or the duties on the surplus silver over the ten seven thousandths per cent allowed free exportation.

BURNED AT SEA.

London, Oct. 26.—The British bark Addie H. Cann, Capt. Haines, has been burned at sea. Her crew were rescued and landed at Castillos.

HARRITY WILL LEAD.

A Pennsylvania Democrat to be Honored.

Reported that He Will Succeed Senator Brice as Chairman of the National Committee.

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—It was reported here last night about circles where democrats congregate that Wm. F. Harrity, secretary of the commonwealth, would succeed Calvin S. Brice, as chairman of the national democratic committee. Mr. Harrity having been chosen to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Congressman Scott, on the committee, this fact is taken as strong basis for the report.

BLAINE IS IN CONTROL.

Chilian Information Must Come From Him.

Washington, Oct. 26.—The Chilian incident now appears to be in the hands of Secretary of State Blaine. All inquiries upon the subject at the white house were referred to the secretary.

When Mr. Blaine was asked regarding the episode he replied that there was nothing new.

Secretary Tracy said that nothing more had been received from either Commander Schley or Minister Egan.

HE MUST DIE.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 26.—Judge Ewing has sentenced Patrick Fitzpatrick to be hung for the murder of Samuel Early in a Penn avenue saloon on Sept. 2.

REFUGE IN RUSSIA.

Vienna, Oct. 26.—The Bulgarian exiles who were expelled from both Servia and Roumania have taken refuge in Russia.

BLAINE'S HEALTH.

The Secretary Back to His Post.

Physically the Maine Man is a Wreck.

His Cheek is Pale and His Step Unfirm.

The President Not at the Depot to Meet Him.

The People Who Came There to Give Ten Times Three Cheers for Him Turned Away with Sadness and Sorrow on Their Faces.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Secretary Blaine arrived here from New York at 4:10 Saturday afternoon. The train on which he came was 15 minutes late. There was a big crowd at the depot to see him, mainly composed of what are known as the Blaine boomers.

They intended to give him a noisy welcome when he appeared, but when they saw him they refrained.

There were a number of newspaper men in attendance, and so was Blaine's son. Assistant Secretary Wharton of the state department and Major Pruden, assistant to the president's private secretary. Mr. Blaine came on a special car, the private car of the president of the Pennsylvania Railroad company. It was the last car on the train.

The Blaine party emerged from the rear end. Mrs. Blaine was the first to get out, then came Mrs. Damrosch and then appeared the secretary of state himself, feebly grasping the railings of the platform of the car and painfully picking his way down the steps to the platform.

He was assisted by Mrs. Blaine and his son. When he reached the platform he took Mrs. Blaine's arm and, hanging heavily upon her, walked to the station through the main sitting-room, avoiding the room where Garfield was shot, and emerging on Sixth street, where his carriage awaited him. He walked slowly, hesitatingly and feebly. He looked like a very sick man. The pallor on his face was ghostly, his lips were blue, his eyes glassy.

He is not in want of flesh; his face on the whole seems well rounded, yet, notwithstanding, he is extremely feeble. He could hardly walk without assistance, and there was a painful tremor in his legs as he slowly moved them.

When he reached his carriage his brother stood with the door opened to assist him. He did not recognize his brother until he was in the carriage and then he bowed faintly and smiled, but the smile was not the old Blaine smile. His wife entered the carriage with him and they were driven to their home in Lafayette Square.

Young Blaine and Mrs. Damrosch followed in another carriage. It is no secret that three or four hundred of the Blaine boomers went to the depot to give ten times three cheers and as many tigers for the secretary of state when he made his appearance on the platform, but his pallid face and feeble step had its effect upon the most enthusiastic of his friends, and instead of cheers he was greeted by them with sad and sorrowful faces and with respectful silence.

The universal remark as he entered his carriage was, "There is no presidential timber there."

Everybody thought that President Harrison would be respectful enough to his secretary of state to go to the depot to meet him, especially as he has not seen him since he started on his great southern and western tour months ago, and before Blaine's serious attack of illness. But Harrison was not at the depot to meet Blaine.

The only white house official present was Major Pruden, Halford's assistant, and Pruden was evidently there for the purpose of making a report on the personal appearance of the secretary of state. Mr. Blaine barely recognized Assistant Secretary Wharton and exchanged but a word with him as he went to his carriage.

Blaine is a very sick man, no matter what may be stated to the contrary, but he is extremely bitter in his feelings against the president, and he will continue to permit his friends to boom him for the presidency in order to get even with Harrison.

It is said to your correspondent, by close and intimate friends of Blaine, that it is his intention to resign the secretaryship of state by the 1st of January and retire to San Antonio, Tex., or to Senator Jones' estate in California for three or four months, or until the meeting of the republican national convention.

He will make this trip to recruit his health and to keep out of the way of politicians with a tendency to worry him. His present intention is to go to San Antonio, Tex., where the dry, healthful climate, he believes, will be beneficial to him.

He has an invitation, however, from Senator Jones to spend some time at his place on the California coast and as he has more friends to the square mile in California than anywhere else in the union, the chances are that he may eventually decide to go there.

Mr. Blaine was met at his house by Assistant Secretary Adee and Chief Clerk Brown, of the state department. After resting for half an hour he was driven to the white house. The president was out driving and Mrs. Harrison entertained the secretary of state for half an hour, or until her husband's return. The secretary and the president conversed for three-quarters of an hour and then the secretary was helped to his carriage and driven home. The president escorted him to the door, but did not help him to enter his carriage. This important function was transacted by officials of the executive mansion.

WANTS TO FIGHT A DUEL.

A Russian Consul Has Been Challenged.

A Difference of Opinion on Religious Matters Has Caused a Ripple of Excitement.

San Francisco, Oct. 26.—A challenge to fight a duel sent by Dr. Nicholas Russell to Vartzy Moitch, Russian consul here, has caused a sensation among the Russian colony.

The affair arose out of troubles in the Russian Greek church, in charge of Bishop Vladimir of the diocese of Alaska, who has been charged by his congregation with all manner of crimes, and who is now being investigated by the grand jury on a criminal charge. Consul Moitch has defended the bishop and this so angered Dr. Russell that he issued the challenge above referred to. So far Moitch has not answered the challenge.

GIVE CHILI A SHOW

Julio Foster on the Recent Outrages.

He Thinks the Probability of a War

Over a Saloon Fight is Very Remote.

All the Trouble Will be Peacefully Settled.

The United States Could Not Afford to Antagonize the Southern Countries for the Sake of a Little Campaign Notoriety.

New York, Oct. 26.—The Herald's Washington correspondent telegraphs as follows:

I called at the Chilian legation Sunday afternoon. Don Pedro Montt, the junta representative in this country, is absent from Washington.

Mr. Julio Foster keeps the legation open, but wants it distinctly understood that he is not in any way officially connected with it. It is but justice to Mr. Foster, in the light of recent criticisms on his actions, to say that he never claimed to be an official representative of the junta, but was here in the capacity of a private Chilian citizen, trying to do what he could for his adopted country. He read the cablegrams from Valparaiso with great interest.

"I supposed my son would have charge of the investigation into the assault upon the American sailors," he said. "He is the criminal judge in Valparaiso and a more just and honorable man does not exist. I have believed all along that the facts in the matter have been greatly exaggerated.

"The dispatch yesterday morning bears me out in my opinion. The row evidently occurred in a saloon. Fights between American sailors and, in fact, those of any foreign country and the Chilians are by no means infrequent.

"The United States government has been a little hasty, I think. Has it any right to demand an indemnity before the crime is proven? The trouble is that the Chilian people are not understood in this country, a fact which is due to meagre information in the text books about that country and its inhabitants.

"The talk about war being declared against Chili if she does not make an apology and give a money indemnity for the lives lost is, I think, premature. Those matters will all be straightened in the most honorable way to both countries.

"There is no doubt that the United States could come around the Horn and eat us up, but in so doing she would find the whole of South America with the exception of Brazil, arrayed against her. What then would become of that great scheme of reciprocity that seems to be the pet idea of this government? But the idea of a war over a common street row is absurd. Have a little patience and give Chili a chance."

The Secrecy Clause of the Electrocution Law Will Be Repealed.

New York, Oct. 26.—The Sun this morning publishes interviews with one hundred candidates for election to the next legislature in relation to the electrical execution law.

It appears that the opinion is almost unanimous that at least that part of the law entailing secrecy should be repealed.

Many of the candidates interviewed declared themselves as opposed to capital punishment. But one candidate in New York city favors the law in its present shape.

THE SYLLABUS.

Points on the Motion in the Ballot Law Case.

Columbus, O., Oct. 26.—Following are the main points of the syllabus of the supreme court in the mandamus case brought by J. H. Thompson, of Hillsboro, to compel the attorney general to begin proceedings and test the constitutionality of the Australian ballot law.

It is clear the writ of mandamus can not be awarded. The proper use of that writ is to command the performance of an act which the law specifically enjoins as a duty resulting from an office, trust or station. Revised statute, section 6741.

It is not contended that the law has made it the duty of the attorney general to commence an action in quo warranto to test the constitutionality of a statute when requested by any person who may have or claims to have an interest in the question. He may in a proper case, upon his own relation, bring such action or he may bring it on leave of the court or a judge in vacation, on the relation of another person. Revised statutes, section 6763. He does not ask leave to bring the action, and an application of another person to him to bring it on his own relation is addressed to his discretion, the exercise of which the court can not control. If he refuses, it must be presumed that his refusal is based upon sufficient cause.

Nor do we deem it proper, in a case like this, to direct the attorney general to bring the action. Section 6762 of the revised statutes provides that the attorney general, when directed by the governor, supreme court or general assembly, shall commence the action in quo warranto. But we think the power of the court under this section should, as a general rule, be exercised only when something relating to the court or its business renders it necessary or advisable. It was not designed, we apprehend, that the court should be called upon to exercise its authority to direct an action to be brought by the attorney general to test the constitutionality of legislation whenever a citizen who feels aggrieved should request it. Other modes are open to him, as they are to plaintiff in this case, for bringing such legislation before the courts.

GLADSTONE AND EGYPT,

The Liberals Are Divided on the Question.

Tories Are Discussing the Subject with Great Success—Gen. Walker Opposed to Abandonment.

London, Oct. 26.—The Tories are making extensive use of Mr. Gladstone's proposed abandonment of Egypt, and their speakers are making that the principal burden of their addresses. The argument is having considerable effect, and there are marked signs of disaffection in the Liberal ranks on the subject.

Gen. Sir. Charles Walker, who has served in India, said yesterday that England might as well prepare to abandon India itself as surrender Egypt and the Suez canal, which would be controlled by any power occupying Egypt.

CASHIER MAPLE.

Will Say Very Little on the Vanloon Arrest.

Columbus Grove, O., Oct. 26.—Cashier Thomas J. Maple, of the Exchange bank, was seen at that institution by a reporter and asked for his opinion about the man Vanloon.

Mr. Maple was inclined to be reticent about the affair, and said he did not want to commit himself.

"The arrest of Vanloon is not unexpected by us. I received a letter from Mrs. Huddle on the 18th of August, and was at first inclined to discredit her theory. She seemed anxious, however, for us to investigate the matter, and, after consulting some of the persons who were not entirely convinced of Roberts' guilt, we decided to look the matter up. While there were some who had identified Roberts as the man, none had been under oath, so that it would not necessarily prevent another man being arrested for the same offense. So, when Mr. Crawford identified the man so positively, we decided to make the arrest, which was accordingly done."

IS OUT FOR CAMPBELL.

The Alliance Herald Supports Democracy.

It is the Only Way to Secure Relief from Tariff Taxation, Says Editor Purvis.

Columbus, O., Oct. 26.—(Special)—The Alliance Herald, edited by Hon. Miller Purvis, has come out for Hon. James E. Campbell. The Herald is the leading organ of the Alliance in Ohio, and its editor, Mr. Purvis, was formerly a leading republican. The Herald says:

"To insure the good of the people we must get relief from the tariff taxation. Let us unite with the democratic party this fall, thus accomplish this much good, and then we can expect their aid and assistance in getting free coinage. Hence we advise all persons who are in favor of tariff reform and free coinage to vote the straight democratic ticket from top to bottom, making victory sure, and in this manner accomplishing at least two great and needed reforms.

"When this has been done then we can urge and hope to obtain many other things that will be for the general good of the masses."

The woman was found a little later lying on the floor, fully dressed, even to the matter of her gloves. Her throat was cut and abdomen ripped open.

WHAT THE CABLE DID.

Charlie Templeton hurried along the crowded street with the crowd. Just as he reached the crossing he was thinking: "This is Thursday. To-morrow I shall leave Chicago and in six hours shall be in Green Valley with dearie, bless her heart. I have news to tell her, too. I have proved my claim."

"Dearie" was Charlie's betrothed. Her real name was Mattie, but he used the other just as much.

At the intersection of the streets there were three tracks for cable cars, two of them going into the tunnel. The crossing is always a dangerous one and the passers-by are accustomed to look sharply for trains.

Charlie had no thought of this. He simply hurried on as rapidly and as happily as he could.

Suddenly there was a shout—rather a dozen shouts, "Jump."

A car was coming around the corner to go into the tunnel. The ground was slippery for there had been a freeze after a rain. Charlie tried to jump out of the way but, his foot slipped, he fell, was struck by the car and thrown bleeding from the track.

A crowd gathered at once. The injured man lay there in the gutter. Blood was flowing from a wound in his head. His arm was broken. A few moments sufficed for a patrol wagon and an ambulance to arrive. Charlie was put into the latter and hurried away to the hospital. The crowd dispersed and immediately forgot all about it.

Charlie had been struck a terrible blow. It was many days before he returned to consciousness. When he finally sat up and looked around him it was with a very stupid look.

"Tell us who you are," said the nurse who sat by him.

He did not answer, only persisting in stupid silence.

"You see we do not know who you are," the nurse continued. "Your valise was picked up in the street after you were hurt, but there was nothing in it or in your pocket by which we could tell who you are. No one has inquired for you. Your friends are no doubt wondering what has become of you. Tell me your name and address."

Charlie only rubbed his head and looked around. He did not understand. He could not quite tell who he was and what he was doing in that long room filled with cots. The nurse had spoken of his being hurt, but he did not remember of anything that had befallen him. He realized that something had happened, for he could scarcely think. He tried hard, but everything he wanted to recall was just beyond his mental grasp. So he only looked at the nurse very stupidly and stared around the room.

Charlie's case was a peculiar one. The blow he had received on the head had destroyed his memory. Cases of this kind are occasionally known to the physicians. The patient forgets his name and his former history. Most that he has learned must be learned again. It is extremely unlikely that the memory of his former life will return to him. Only some powerful shock which brings up before him vividly something that he knew before can restore him to his former self.

The medical attendants at the hospital were not long in discovering Charlie's condition. They knew that if he had friends who wanted to find him they would be heard from sooner or later. When his wounds had healed one of the physicians gave him employment as man of all work at his own home. So Charlie began his new life as a servant.

There were good reasons for Charlie's "friends" not hunting him up. He had just established his claim to a small fortune in an eastern state. His relatives who were then in possession were more than pleased when the months went by and they heard nothing from him. He had no immediate relatives. Mattie was the only one in the world who was dear to him. She was an orphan too, a clerk in a dry goods store in their native town, Green Valley. When his time to return came and he did not reappear she was alarmed. There was some talk among the citizens of investigating his case but nothing was done. Mattie did what she could to find out what had become of him, but inexperience and modesty prevented her from making the search she would have made had she been his wife. However, she did not give up. She had a clew—merely an account in a newspaper of an unknown man who had met with an accident and had been taken to a hospital. She left Green Valley.

Charlie Templeton was slowly becoming accustomed to the new world in which he found himself, for it was a new world to him. His position was a lowly one but it was all he was suited for.

He has but one joy in life. Some time after he came to work for the doctor there came a young lady to board next door. She was a clerk in a down town store and seemed to take a marked interest in the stupid looking fellow whom she frequently saw sprinkling the grass on the doctor's lawn with the hose or cutting it with the mower. She asked him strange questions. "Think hard now," she would say. "Do you not remember Green Valley and—Mattie?"

In answer he would shake his head. Then the girl would look sad and walk away while he would follow her dreamily with his eyes. He adored her. She was a vision. She was as high above him as the stars above the earth, and he worshiped her as he would a celestial being.

The winter with its coating of ice on the streets came again. Charlie—or rather Jim, as the doctor called him, not knowing his real name, was able to find his way around the city and was occasionally sent out on errands.

One day he was again walking down the street where he was first hurt. It was nearly 6 o'clock and dark, and the street was filled with men and women was thinking of his goddess in his hurrying along from their work. Charlie vague, misty way. She was enveloped in a cloud in his mind. He did not even know her name. He knew that she worked somewhere in that part of the city, but he did not know where. He wished she would come along so that he could stand by and look at her.

Suddenly there was a shout—rather a dozen shouts, "Jump."

Strange things happen sometimes. Charley was struck by a car just as he had been a year before and was thrown violently from the track. There was an ugly wound on his head from which blood flowed, making his hair a dark red clot.

For a time he knew nothing. Then there came faint gleams of returning consciousness like the streaks of dawn on a December morning. He felt himself sitting there in the cold street, held in someone's arms. He was thinking.

"This is Thursday. To-morrow I shall leave Chicago and in six hours I shall be in Green Valley with dearie. I have news to tell her, too. I have proved my claim."

"Charlie," said a sweet voice behind him.

Charlie opened his eyes. There was a crowd around him and an ambulance was backing up to the curbstone. It was a woman's voice that spoke and her arms were around him. A stray lock of her hair brushed his cheek. He looked into her anxious face.

Who was she?

Gleams of remembrance from his two lives came into his mind. The shaded street of Green Valley and the girl he loved arose before him. They were far away, but she was there by him, her arms around him. Yet she was an angel, his vision, who asked him strange questions.

He put his hand to his head. Then to his limbs. They were unbroken. A great joy had arisen within him and he grew stronger. With her help he arose. He looked at the ambulance, at the crowd. Then he put his arm half around her to help her through the throng.

"Come, dearie," he said. "Let us go home."

FOOLING THE BARON.

Among the various admirable productions of taste which the guests of Baron Rothschild never fail to admire is a magnificent service of porcelain, of singular beauty, elegance of shape and finish, and remarkable for the artistic richness of its paintings.

The way in which the baron became possessed of it is worth relating.

One day an old man, careworn, wrinkled, feeble, and apparently tottering on the verge of the grave, presented himself before M. de Rothschild, soliciting the honor of an interview with the famous banker.

The old man was so aged, so poor, and had altogether so dejected an aspect, that the baron was immediately impressed with a compassionate feeling toward him, which feeling became one of lively interest on learning that he was a Jew.

It is well known that the Israelites are very charitably disposed toward all their brethren. The aged visitor took from his bag a rich and beautiful plate, so splendidly wrought that the baron admired it exceedingly and became greatly delighted with it.

"Sir," said the patriarch, "will you buy this of me? I have the whole set, and it has struck me that a service so beautiful cannot find a more fitting place than in the mansion of the prince of financiers."

"It is, indeed, very fine," said the baron. "How much do you want for the service?"

"Look you, sir," said the old man, "I am bowed down with many years, and have not long to live. I am poor and wish to end my days in comparative comfort. Will you, in exchange for this valuable set of porcelain, give me an income for life of 100 francs a month? It is not much money for you, and I am so old."

The baron looked at the poor man, examined the plate again, and, after a few minutes' reflection, said:

"Well, be it so. Here is the first payment. Send me the service and give me your name, that I may have it entered in my treasurer's books."

The splendid set of porcelain was delivered the same day to the baron, and in a month afterward, while he was seated in the counting-house, a man entered and asked for the second payment of the promised income.

But the man was young, scarcely 30 years of age, of a vigorous constitution and great muscular development, and looked as if he would live for a hundred years.

"But you are not the man," exclaimed the astonished banker.

"Excuse me, baron," said he, "I am indeed the man."

"But you appeared at least 80 years old," said the baron.

"But, sir, I am only 30," said the man.

"In fact," continued the baron, "I thought your venerable appearance did not belie your assertion."

"I have wonderfully recovered," answered the man, "thanks to your generosity."

The baron laughed heartily, and gave orders for payment of the money, exclaiming:

"Ah, you are an excellent comedian, and have taken me in thoroughly."

"I am, probably, the first who has done so," replied the Jew, politely bowing to the millionaire.

For several years M. de Rothschild paid the monthly allowance; but then this porcelain service is so exquisite that he saw no reason to complain.

PAYN'S ENGLISH.

The English language in matters of style is extremely flexible. While it is a right and proper rule of rhetoric that language should be simple and direct, there are occasions when broken sentences and parenthetical clauses serve an admirable purpose, and are not to be objected to unless obscuring the sense. Mr. Payne uses the parenthesis with great frequency. He is a master at it. By its use he lightens his descriptions, he takes his reader into his confidence, as it were, with an aside or an undertone, and gives to his writing just that light, conversational and piquant quality that makes it characteristic of him. Mr. Payn is, of course, a creator of style. A man cannot write a score or more of novels that hold their place in literature and not have an influence on style and language. A book on rhetoric is not designed to control or even to guide makers of literature; but it is they who determine what the principles of rhetoric shall be. Among the molders each man is his own master: Johnson was Samuel Johnson's authority for his long, ornate, well rounded periods; Hugo was Victor Hugo's authority for his terse, nervous points; and Payn is James Payn's authority for his parenthesis.

A LESSON IN HISTORY.

What Countries Have a Foreign Market.

An Interesting Statement at This Time of the Year.

Of All the Great Trade of India Not Quite Four Per Cent. Goes to the American Continent and the West Indies.

London, Oct. 26.—The latest report on the foreign trade of India shows that 50 per cent. of it is enjoyed by England. Eighteen per cent. is with other European states. Asiatic countries count in the calculation only for 21 to 22 per cent., and Africa (chiefly the eastern coast and Egypt) for something less than 6 per cent. Not quite 4 per cent. goes to the American continent and the West Indies, and hardly 1 per cent. is turned over to Australia. The Egyptian share of the trade is nominal, the commodities exported hither being on their way to the Asiatic coast of the Levant and to Europe.

ANGRY RAILROADERS.

Protest Against Being Called Thugs, Bums and Tramps.

Saturday evening a number of railroad men living at Air Line Junction met with a view of calling a mass meeting to protest against the charges of the evening republican organs which have called them thugs, bums and tramps.

The organ on the corner, in attempting to crawl out of the ditch it has dug, has made itself ridiculous. The charges to the extent of half a column appeared the day after the Air Line Junction meeting. There is not getting over or around it, and the accusers will be held strictly to account.

And Immediately Jump to the Conclusion That It Is the Gun Used at Columbus Grove.

Columbus, O., Oct. 26.—Detectives from Ottawa, Putnam county, visited Westerville, near here, yesterday, and at the home of Van Loon, found the identical revolver, it is said, which was sold to the Columbus Grove bank robber, and with which he is said to have done his bloody work.

They have no doubt but that Van Loon is the guilty man.

BICYCLE STEALING.

A Mania for Gobbling Wheels Appears To Be On—Another Stolen and Recovered.

Bicycle stealing seems to be a fad just now and a number have been stolen recently. In this city, however, it has proven most disastrous to the thieves, as every one of them have been caught. Another case occurred Saturday night, when a wheel belonging to O. W. Schafer, of 724 Oak street, was taken from in front of Johnson Bros.' store on Perry street.

The police were notified at once, and before morning Officer Williams arrested a man at Auburndale with the stolen bicycle in his possession. This man says his name is John Watt, and claims to come from Monroe, Mich.

In police court this morning he waived examination, but in doing so stated that he was guilty. He was bound over to the grand jury on a charge of grand larceny.

John Lavin Tries to Do Up the Patrol Wagon Force, Buts Gets the Worst of It.

John Lavin, a cigarmaker, was arrested on Canton avenue about midnight Saturday for being drunk. After being loaded into the patrol wagon, Lavin became very abusive to the officers and all their efforts to quiet him only enraged him more. He attempted several times to strike the officers, and in one of the scuffles he kicked Officer Higgins in the stomach. Just before arriving at the station Lavin suddenly jumped up and struck Officer Higgins on the head, knocking his hat off and made a desperate attempt to pound him. In the melee Lavin was struck on the nose, cutting the skin and making it bleed badly. In police court this morning he was fined the costs for drunkenness and $5 and costs for resisting the officer.

Breakfast Vanities

BY MRS. DEARBORN,
Principal Boston Cooking School.

Mix and sift together 1 pint pastry flour, ½ tea sp. salt and 1 heaping tea sp. Cleveland's Baking Powder. Mix to a stiff dough with milk, using only sufficient to make it stiff enough to roll.

Toss out on a slightly floured board, roll out very thin, cut into small squares with a sharp knife or pastry wheel and drop into boiling lard.

Shake the kettle gently to facilitate their rising, and when well puffed up turn them and brown the other side. Drain on paper. They should be cooked in fat hot enough to brown a piece of bread while counting sixty, and are quite hollow when cooked. Serve with maple syrup if liked.—(Copyright, 1891.)

Use only Cleveland's baking powder, the proportions are made for that.

Pure crystal cream of tartar and soda make a perfectly wholesome leaven. There is no other leavening power in Cleveland's Baking Powder.

THE PASTORS' UNION.

Good Meeting This Morning—The "Rest League."

The Toledo Pastors' Union met this morning in the First Congregational church and listened to a paper by Rev. S. L. Roberts on the "Pulpit and Pew," in which he dealt with the relations of the pastor to his congregation and the duties involved on both sides. This was ably discussed by those present. At the next meeting Rev George Candee will read a paper on "The Comings of our Lord."

A meeting of the executive board of the "Rest League," was called for immediately after the pastors' meeting. This is a recent organization for the purpose of making a fight for better Sunday observance. The executive board is large but only a few of the ministers were present, and no business was transacted. Rev. Anderson stated that he would be obliged to resign the secretaryship as it involved more work than he could attend to. The situation was briefly discussed, but no action was taken.

AN OPEN LETTER

To the Toledo Natural Gas Trustees Anent the Recent Order.

Gentlemen—The public prints say you have caused notice of a change in rates to be served upon many persons and companies having contracts not yet expired.

These contracts should be filled if the consumers carry out their part of the contract, and if the gas does not fail you.

At the time you sent out these notices you say you had the gas. You have it now, and for all you now know it will not fail during the lifetime of these contracts. No citizen or taxpayer should ask you to deprive one man to whom you are under contract for the purpose of giving it to another at a higher price while there is an obligation out by you for the city, or at any future time. If you go further than I have stated and notify those you have contracts with that you have no gas, or that gas is failing so that you will not carry out the contracts, will not the taxpayer see he is in hard times? What will the 10,000 consumers who have not yet got city gas think about their chance? But you have the gas. You say so, and I believe you have it to carry out the present contracts.

Carry out the contracts now made on your part without fail, for that is just to the city and the consumer; you are then in position to raise on new contracts.

If you have done what you have deemed best when you made these contracts, no good citizen will complain as to this part of your duties.

Respectfully yours,
AN OLD PIPE-LINER

STUART'S INSOLENCE.

His Insult to Captain Hubbell of the Cycling Club.

Sheriff Stuart is so completely demoralized that he is running out of friends. His attempt recently to run down Ed Hubbell, captain of the Cycling club, has incensed many members of the society, and if what Stuart says is true, "no cycler has any rights on the streets of Toledo."

Stuart in his buggy came on a dead run around the corner of Memorial hall and ran into Mr. Hubbell. The collision was such that it injured the bicycle badly.

Mr. Hubbell, being on the right side of the road, naturally felt indignant. He threatened to have Stuart arrested for fast driving.

"See here, young fellow," said the sheriff, "if you talk back to me I'll run you in. See? You fellows have no rights on the streets, anyway."

A week ago Stuart gave another member of the club a header that might have killed him, but Stuart, instead of stopping and seeing if the young man was hurt, laughed and rode on.

This kind of business is making Stuart lots of votes—in a horn.

STREET RAILWAY MATTERS.

The Circuit Court Refuses to Enjoin

The Consolidated Company from Proceeding with Its Work—The Gist of the Decision.

The two injunctions applied for by the Toledo Electric street railway company through Dennis Coghlin and John Mulhenny, restricting the Consolidated from erecting a trolly wire in Monroe and Summit streets, have been rushed through the courts at a lively rate.

The Consolidated last week applied for and secured a dissolution of both injunctions.

The Robisons appealed to the circuit court. The argument was submitted in chambers, Saturday morning, and a decision handed down late Saturday afternoon sustaining the common pleas court in dissolving the injunctions.

Judge Scribner delivered the opinion, and after reviewing the case, ordinance involving and the grant to the Electric company stated:

"The ordinance of November 25, 1889, should save such reasonable construction as will, if possible give force and effect to all of its material provisions and harmonize it with all existing ordinances conferring rights and privileges upon street railway companies. A constitution which will materially impair or substantially destroy such existing rights should if possible be avoided."

He then reviewed the ordinance and in closing, said:

3. The ordinance of November, 1889, upon the true constructoin of which this controversy largely depends, contains the following provisions: "For the purpose of dispensing with as many poles in the streets as possible, all existing poles therein are authorized to be used for electric street railway purposes, upon reasonable compensaton being made for the use thereof to the person or company owning the same. Provided, that only one set of wires and poles shall be erected upon any one street." By the terms of this ordinance street railway companies were required to file their written acceptance of the terms of the ordinance, and also a bond with approved security, before they should be entitled to its benefits. Both street railway companies complied with these requirements; the Consolidated company December 11, 1889, and the Toledo Electric company July 14, 1890. The Electric company placed its poles and wires in place November 17, 1889.

4. It is now contended by the plaintiffs, who sue under the statute in behalf of the city, that inasmuch as the poles and wires of the Electric company were placed in position at the date named, the Consolidated is prevented, under the terms above mentioned of the ordinance of November 25, 1889, from placing a second set of poles and wires to operate its lines of railway upon and along the streets so occupied. It is claimed on behalf of the plaintiffs that by force and effect of the provisions of that ordinance above quoted, the company which first succeeds in erecting its poles and stringing its wires thereby acquires the exclusive right to operate with electricity lines of street railway upon the streets so occupied. Should the ordinance of November 25, 1889, receive the construction so contended for?

(a.) Had the Consolidated company succeeded in getting its poles and wires in place in advance of the Electric company, it would, under the construction contended for by the plaintiffs, have acquired the exclusive right to use such parts of its lines as are so equipped, and would, therefore, have bisected the system or line of railway provided for in the ordinance of March 27, 1889, and materially impaired or substantially destroyed the franchise conferred by that ordinance.

(b.) A construction leading to these results would have invited a race between the two rival companies, and tended to provoke breaches of the peace and other disturbances in the public streets of the city.

(c.) Such a construction also results in conferring a monopoly in the use of electric appliances in the street. A monopoly of this character may not, in our opinion, be conferred by the city council, and we will not so construe the provisions in question unless compelled to do so, as to impute to the council an intention to do a thing which they are forbidden to do. We have already held in another case that under this ordinance no provision is made for compelling either company to furnish power to the other.

5. If the provision in question be a mere exercise of the police power we are clearly of opinion that it cannot by bill in equity or by injunction.

6. As at present advised, we are of opinion that when the Consolidated company December 11, 1889, filed its acceptance and bond with the city authorities, as required by the ordinance of November 25, 1889, it thereby stipulated that it would erect but one set of wires and poles upon the streets in question; it did not bind itself that no other company acquiring from the city the right so to do should not erect for itself a second set of wires and poles. We think the same rule applies to the Electric company, under its acceptance filed in July, 1890. Neither company could be deprived of the right, under the ordinances then existing, by the action of the other party, from providing and placing in the streets the appliances necessary for the operation of their respective systems.

We do not determine the question now pending before us in another case, as to what may be the respective rights and remedies of the two street railway companies, in case it should be hereafter found that two independent lines of trolley wire over the same track cannot be successfully maintained and operated.

It follows that the injunction prayed for must be refused.

As soon as the circuit court entered the decree, preparation to suspend a trolley wire in Monroe street was begun, and about 1 o'clock employes began stringing wire.

The men had worked but a short time when they discovered that the current was on, and the wires dangerously alive. Two of the workmen received severe shocks. They were about to give up for the night when the Robison trolley wire came in contact with a telephone wire leading into Frey's stationery store, and a small fire was the result. The department was called out and subdued the flames at a loss of about $50.

After this the current was shut off, and the work progressed without further impediment.

Manager Lang in conversation with a Bee this morning denounced the Robisons' action in this matter in the strongest terms. He said:

"It was malice pure and simple. They claim it was necessary to keep the current on at that hour. I know better. We waited until after the business of the day was over so as not to endanger the lives of our men. There were no cars running at that hour, and the idea of keeping the machinery running at a big expense to move a few cars around in the barn is simply absurd.

"The current was left on to prevent us from stringing the wire on Monroe street, I know, and for this reason only. About 1:30 Sunday morning my men phoned me of the trouble, and that the Robisons were making an effort to obtain police interference. I came down town and hurried to the police station. Sitting in the captain's office was Coleman and Perkins, Robison's superintendent and electrician. Lieutenant Robinson was standing at the phone. When I entered Coleman said to Robinson, 'Never mind now.' 'Well, you may mind,' I said to the lieutenant; 'Go on, I want to know just what is going on here.' Lieutenant Robinson was phoning to Chief O'Dwyer for advice, whether to prevent us from putting up the wire or not. Chief O'Dwyer told him not to interfere.

"Now, put the two together and you can see that there was malice in the whole proceeding."

WE SHOW THE FANCY THINGS | In cloaks for young ladies, children and the wee little bits of tots. LASALLE & KOCH.

It is estimated that there are 1,500 square miles of timber, sequoia, and yellow and white pine in Fresno county, California, which will average 8,000 feet per acre, or 9,600,000 feet per tract. This, at a valuation of $1 per 1,000 feet, represents a value of $96,000,000. The present output of the county is about 40,000,0000 feet, and is worth close to $7,000,000.

HOW THEY DO SMOKE.

The Frenchman Likes His Cigar and the Lady Her Cigarette.

Paris, Oct. 26.—Government statistics show that French smokers consumed in 1890 2,000,000 francs worth of foreign cigars, 2,600,000 francs worth of home cigars, 10,000,000 francs of cigarettes, 2,000,000 of snuff, and 91,000,000 of pipe tobacco. There is an increase of 700,000 francs in the expenditure for ladies' cigarettes. There is one anti-tobacco society in France.

There Will Be No War with Chili.

England Fears that Her Trade Would be Injured Should an Outbreak Occur.

London, Oct. 26.—The news of the critical relations between the United States and Chili has excited lively interest here, especially in circles interested in South American trade. As English capital virtually controls the nitrate deposits, and is established in that control more firmly than ever by the result of the war, there is a general desire on the part of those interested for peace.

War between the United States and Chili would mean, sooner or later, a blockade of Chilian ports and interference with foreign trade.

THEY MADE BIG BILLS.

The Head of a Gang of Counterfeiters Arrested.

They Were Turning Out Thousand Sweedish Mark Notes and Getting Them Cashed.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Mr. J. A. W. Grip, minister from Sweden and Norway, has forwarded to his government an elaborate report containing the details of one of the most extensive counterfeiting enterprises ever undertaken.

The money counterfeited was the 1,000 Swedish mark notes, and the skill displayed in its execution showed that the counterfeiter was an artist of no mean ability.

Great quantities of the money has been spread broadcast in Europe and has been passed by confederates in various countries on the continent. The head of the counterfeiting gang has been arrested in the state of Washington and is now awaiting extradition. His name is Albert Sjoudin alias Olaf Alberton.

United States officers are working in conjunction with the Swedish minister to secure the arrest of the rest of the gang.

HOW TO VOTE.

All persons who are opposed to McKinley and high taxes should vote just this way: Put an X at the left of the words "Democratic Ticket," thus:

X | DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

What the tariff tax law doesn't do to discourage foreigners from coming to the Chicago exposition, the railway slaughters will accomplish. When an American boasts of the facilities for railway travel in this country he is met by the foreigner with a taunt of the wholesale slaughters that follow one another unchecked and unrebuked.

The republican evening organs begin to realize that they made bad breaks when they called the railroad men at Air Line Junction "thugs and bums and tramps." They will realize it more forcibly next Tuesday night when the returns come in from the Junction. Campbell and lower taxes is the slogan out there.

Looks now as if the tariff of France on "the favored nations" plan would leave the United States out, along with Italy and Roumania. Great Britain, Russia, Mexico, Turkey, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal and Sweden will be listed for the minimum tariff. That is according to the plan of our own bunglers, and the McKinley law with its contradictory potch is directly responsible for it. If the United States elects to grant special privileges to the South American states, France will retaliate, or perhaps, follow the "wise example" by making her small neighbors of Europe the "favored nations."

The decision of the circuit court in the street railway cases is satisfactory to the people of Toledo, who long since became tired of the wrangle which interfered with rapid transit. The Consolidated company was wrong at first, but public sentiment speedily changed when the other company interfered with the rights which the Consolidated ought, without question, to possess in its own property. The council aided in the wrong which the circuit court has just righted. Now that the companies know where they stand in law, it is time to give the people a chance. Quick service and plenty of it on all the lines will suit the public.

This is the last week of the campaign. The lines are drawn and the issues are practically made plain to the voters. The republican ticket represents the policy of extreme federal taxation for special benefits to favored classes. The chief exponent of the high tax theory is the candidate of the republican party. While it is only a state campaign the natoinal has overlapped the state line, and in other states Ohio is considered a lively skirmish pending the big battle of ballots in 1892. The democratic party is making a splendid fight upon the issue of tariff reform. Gov. Campbell is more than a match for his opponent and no leader ever made a better campaign than our own valiant governor is making and which is now so brilliantly closing. He is a low taxer, the representative of the people, the advocate of fair trade, and enlarged industries. He ought to be elected and we believe he will be elected.

The "dissenters" are after Dr. Patton with sharp sticks. As chief accuser of Dr. Briggs it is a bit uncomfortable to have his own words uttered only four years ago brought up to confront him. If one is heresy then so is the other. One of the charges against Dr. Briggs is, he holds out hope for reclamation for the soul after death. Dr. Patton is quoted as follows:

Those who hear the gospel in this world will not have another chance hereafter; those who do not hear it or have no opportunity here will have some chance in the future.

Our own confession of faith, which some think very straight-laced, does hold out that hope, although it does say that the heathen cannot be saved by framing their lives according to the light of nature.

He says he must have been incorrectly reported, but others who heard and who remember say the report was not a longhand one, but was taken by an expert stenographer. The reminiscence gives a new interest to the controversy.

Major McKinley insults the intelligence of every true American who hears him when he says:

This country cannot get on without a protective tariff unless we bring our labor to the conditions of the labor in Europe.

Labor is free in the world's market and Mr. McKinley knows it. Almost within stone's throw of his meeting a riot was imminent because mine laborers had been turned from their places and negroes and Hungarians at "pauper" prices put in their places. He knows that nearly three hundred instances of reduction in wages are actually and undoubtedly listed since his tax law went effect. He knows that the advanced prices they have to pay on the necessities of life, from a woolen blanket to a tin tea pot are directly traceable to that high tariff. He knows that the English laborer can buy a coat or a carpet for a third less than it costs a laborer in this country.

In all comparisons, the English laborer is quoted because England has come to her present commercial supremacy under free trade, and because it is easy to stir the hatred of the American against the mother country, when in point of fact, the laborer in England is better off than in any country of the world save our own. Go into the protected countries of Europe to find "pauper" labor. Mr. McKinley knows all these things when he proclaims the falsehood which we have quoted.

Attorney General Miller is an adept at hair splitting. In his brief for the United States in the suit of Marshall Field & Co., and other firms, to test the constitutionality of the McKinley tariff law, he says, of the reciprocity clause:

It is not a delegation of legislative power to the president but is only a legislative direction by which an alternative provision of existing law is made applicable to the happening of a fact, the existence of which is to be determined by the president.

The difference between a grant of legislative power and the right of the president to "determine the happening of a fact" and suspend a law by proclaiming a new action contingent upon "the happening of such fact" may be something the president's old law partner can see clearly. The clause reads:

"Whenever and so often as the president shall be satisfied" (that any government of a country producing certain articles) "is imposing duties or exactions upon the agricultural or other products of the United States" (contrary to the treaty stipulation) "he shall have the power and it shall be his duty to suspend the proclamation to that effect, the provisions of this act," (relating to the articles aforesaid.)

The great pity is that the constitutionality of the law cannot be pronounced upon by the supreme court before the elections occur, in which that law is the main issue. Small wonder that foreigners have difficulty in understanding our "methods." Perhaps it's all true that the supreme judges are so out of condition, the consideration of the question had to be postponed, and perhaps it is more true that the administration party knew it couldn't afford to suffer the overturning and the consequent enlightenment that such a trial would bring about, just on the eve of election. As the Bee has before remarked, it would not be the first time the supreme court of the United States has accommodated itself to party exigencies.

LOOK FOR THE ROOSTER.

Proud bird of Democracy, he is at the head of every democratic ticket that will be voted in Ohio this year.

Look for our fighting cock on your ticket, and right below you will find the words "Democratic Ticket." At the left of the words put an X mark. Then fold your ticket and deposit it with the judges. That will be a vote for "Fighting Jimmie Campbell" and will be a big vote for lower taxes and fair play.

A Badly Scared Administration

The anxiety prevailing in Washington over the outcome of the Ohio election has been shown in the persistency with which the "fat" has been fried out of the poor department clerks, who at best are seldom out of debt; and it is still more pointedly confessed in the departure of Secretary Foster from his post of duty on a spell binding tour among the Ohio voters. These facts give the lie to the confident boastings of the McKinley managers, and make it clear that the administration will spare neither men nor money in its efforts to pull through the Napoleon of high taxes.—Philadelphia Record.

A Tough Test for the Machines.

The attention of the experts who are testing the merits of the various typesetting machines in this city is called to the fact that the Inter-Ocean has begun to set its tariff editorials upon the machines in use in its office. A mechanical device that can stand this test without breaking down is far superior to any mere human printer yet encountered.—Chicago Times.

Surplus Reduction Has One Good Result.

The customs receipts at New York for the first 20 days in October were $5,994,202, against $11,433,273 for the corresponding period last year. If this kind of anti-surplus racket keeps up the next congress will find itself Holmanized in spite of itself, and the life of a Washington lobbyist won't be worth the living.—Washington Post.

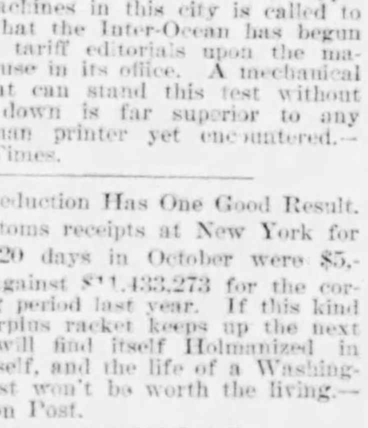
Not the Business of the Next Congress.

Chicago's pearl button industry is dead. Six hundred per cent. could not save it from inanition. The first work of congress should be to increase the pearl button tariff to 2,400 per cent. If the industry is ever to be established here it must first secure adequate protection.—Chicago Mail.

One More Instance.

The McKinley tariff act having increased the tariff tax on cloaks from 45 cents per pound and 40 per cent. to 49 1-2 cents per pound and 60 per cent., a firm of cloakmakers in this city has shown its love for the working men and women by reducing wages 20 per cent.—New York World.

Vote the Rooster Ticket.



Put an X mark under the Rooster, like this:

X | Democratic Ticket.

And It Has Neither.

The contempt of the republicans for the conscience voter, and the voter who thinks for himself, has never been more boldly expressed than in this campaign. The party of Quay, Raum and Wanamaker has but little need in its ranks for either conscience or independence.—Boston Globe.

He Will Be Gratified.

They do say that Senator Wm. B. Allison wouldn't feel so very bad if Iowa should go democratic again. That would make Iowa a doubtful state, and statesmen from doubtful states are always bigger than equally big statesmen from elsewhere.—Boston Herald.

Another Reciprocity (Limited) Triumph.

The tariff committee of the French senate has decided on a tax of 25 francs per 100 kilos on American pork. That is a McKinley tax of $5 on every 220 pounds—another "triumph of republican reciprocity."—St. Louis Republic.

THE LAND OF BOODLERS.

Canada Robbed by the People She Harbors.

Owen Eugene Murphy Commits Another Crime.

Driven Out of the States for Stealing He Is Not Long Across the Border Before He is up to His Old Tricks.

Quebec, Oct. 26.—Owen Eugene Murphy, formerly secretary of the excise commission of New York, who fled from that city to Canada some years ago with $60,000 of the commission's money, has again sought safety in flight, this time from Quebec, and none too soon, to escape the execution of a sentence of seven years' confinement in the provincial penitentiary.

His latest crime was conspiracy to defraud to the amount of $400,000, and his companion in crime was Robert Henry McGreevy, contractor.

Only a few hours after Murphy and McGreevy had skipped the town the jury returned a verdict of guilty. The sentence for the crime being seven years in the penitentiary cannot be imposed in the absence of the condemned, but either or both of them are good for its full value should they ever be found on Canadian soil. Their names will again be called in court, after which bench warrants will be issued for their arrest. Meanwhile the law's delay will enable the fugitives to be well out of the way.

When Murphy came to Canada, 12 years ago, with his American gold, leaving behind him the famous note on his desk saying, "God helps those who help themselves, but God help the man who gets caught helping himself here," he was taken into the contracting firm of Larkin, Connolly & Co., Connolly being his uncle.

He put up the scheme that enabled the firm to swindle the Canadian government out of nearly a million dollars, with the aid of Thomas McGreevy, M. P., and the influence of Sir Hector Langevin, as proved in the course of the investigation at the late session of the dominion parliament, which resulted in Sir Hector's resignation, in McGreevy's seat being declared vacant, and in the minister of justice being instructed to take criminal proceedings against the members of the firm.

It was shown that they had bought the influence of cabinet ministers and of members of parliament by large contributions to election funds, and had also bribed engineers and inspectors of the public works department to make false returns.

Murphy and Robert McGreevy, a brother of the Hon. Thomas, were paid $180,000 each as their share of the boodle, and claiming that it was not enough, gave the whole snap away and were the mainstays of the Ottawa investigation.

To be further revenged on Michael Connolly, Murphy produced a note for $400,000 signed by him on a scrap of paper, without date and sold it to Robert McGreevy, who forthwith sued to recover the amount.

McGreevy evidently knew it was a fraud action, proof being adduced that Connolly received no value for the note and that it was made in fun while all the parties concerned were playing a quiet little $5 limit game of poker.

Then naturally followed the criminal prosecution for conspiracy, in which Michael Connolly yesterday created widespread interest by repeating Murphy's story of his escape from New York.

He said that he knew Murphy was a defaulter in New York because he had told him so when he arived in Canada, and even detailed how the detectives were on his track as he took the train. He had used, he said, a large amount of the money belonging to the excise board.

When Connelly was asked how he could have any confidence in him he said that Murphy had excited his sympathy and that of his friends by the story he had told them. Murphy had said that he lost a great deal in New York by a decline in real estate values and took money from the public funds.

He was too old, he said, to put on his apron again and go back to his bench, and, as he wanted to begin life again, he said he had determined to try it in Canada, and that if he succeeded in business it was his firm intention to pay back what he had taken and make restitution.

If Murphy has kept his promise and returned any of his New York stealings the fact is unknown here. The judge charged strongly against the accused and the jury was only five minutes in arriving at a verdict. McGreevy is supposed to be in the United States.

Murphy cannot go there except in disguise, as he is wanted in New York, but may be watching an opportunity near the frontier to take passage from some Atlantic port to South America or Europe. Both refugees own considerable property here, which will probably be attached by the Canadian government in civil actions to be entered to recover the sums out of which the department of public works has been defrauded by them.

CANNOT SMOKE HIM OUT.

Chairman Hahn Has No Figures for the Public.

He Refuses to Tell the Voters of Ohio What the Poll Now Going on is Revealing.

Columbus, Oct. 26.—Chairman Hahn, of the republican state executive committee, was called on by a reporter and asked togive his views on the situation. The gentleman hesitated in answering, as if revolving in his mind the advisability of letting go of his information at this time. He did not act as one who has a "sure thing" either on a horse race or an election, and after a moment's reflection said:

"I would hardly know what to say at this time."

"Your estimate of the situation from your standpoint, with the probable figures, if you please, would be acceptable."

Mr. Hahn again paused, and just when it was thought he was ready to enlighten the public from the McKinley standpoint, he "flashed" the interviewer by unloading a very mild statement, saying:

"The poll of the vote coming in from the various counties is quite satisfactory to this committee, but it is not yet complete and it would be imprudent for me at this time to give you the republican plurality in the state or to attempt an estimate before I am in possession of information that would enable me to give facts that can be relied upon. Suffice it to say that we have no question whatever to the election of the entire republican ticket."

Mr. Hahn then switched off on to another subject, evidently being anxious to enter a plea of not guilty as to the indictment that the republican committee is in the possession of large sums of money, contributed by the favored classes, who are protected by the McKinley bill. On this subject Mr. Hahn delivered himself as follows:

"This is about the time in the campaign our democratic friends usually start that story. They seem to have a faculty of looking at men's private bank accounts."

All attempts to induce Mr. Hahn to give an estimate of the plurality claimed for McKinley were unavailing, and he declined positively to make any further statement.

Exactly.

Mr. Blaine says that the McKinley tariff law has had his hearty support "ever since it was perfected by the insertion of the reciprocity clause." In other words, he believes it to be a good thing with power given to the president to annul it.—New Orleans Delta.

A Figure-Head of Impositions.

With pearl buttons in his weskit and a tin cup in his hand, Mr. McKinley makes an imposing figure.—Courier-Journal.

WILL VOTE FOR CAMPBELL.

A Toledo Republican Gives Reasons Why He Cannot Vote for McKinley.

It is coming our way. On every side is heard the voices of converts to democracy, while a weak or faltering democrat is something as hard to discover as the man who made the dollar on the strength of the McKinley bill.

Mr. C. P. Warren, 538 Erie street, called at the Bee office Saturday and made a confession of conversion to the democratic faith.

"Foraker's tirade the other night," he said, "converted me. I have been a republican, but when a representative of the party makes such false and unfounded statements as did Foraker—statements that I know to be false—then I am through with that party. Time was when the republicans did not have to resort to falsehood and subterfuge.

"I have been a sailor for 40 years, I sailed out and into every port between Portland, Maine, and New Orleans, and between 1851 and 1859 the American flag was the flower of the sea. It was to be seen in every port of the world. I've seen American vessels lying four and five abreast in the harbor of Rio Janerio and I've seen the flag float over vessels in the China seas and Indian ocean way back in the early 50's."

"Are times better then than now, Mr. Warren?"

"Better? Well I should say not. In 1852 I could buy a pair of seaboots for $2 that would now cost me $4, and I could buy a pair of sailors' satinette trousers for $2 that now cost $4.50, and so it runs. You don't see one American flag on the seas now where then you saw 50."

Mr. Warren, like many other heretofore good republicans, will vote for James E. Campbell and tariff reform.

ORDERED TO TURN OUT.

Manufactured Enthusiasm for McKinley in Cleveland.

The Republicans Can Force Their Employes to Follow the Robber Barons in Parade But They Can't Vote Them This Year.

Cleveland, Oct. 26.—(Special)—The reception to Major McKinley Saturday was not what the republicans contemplated, regardless of the fact that the street sweepers and the city building employes were paid to march in the procession. Republicans can march their workmen behind the tariff barons under pain of dismissal, but they can't vote them at the polls under the Australian ballot system in this year of our Lord.

THE TRUTH NOT PLEASANT,

But It's Well Enough to Face It—Col. Smead's Remembrance.

"I was pleased with the editorial in Saturday's issue upon the subject of Hebrews," said Isaac D. Smead. "You were right when you said he is rarely behind the penitentiary bars.

"During the four years I was on the prison board there were over 5,000 prisoners in the prison, and among them all there were only seven Hebrews.

"There were always more Methodists than of any other denomination. For instance, I remember that one year among the arrivals there were 235 Methodists and 50 Presbyterians. One member of the board was a Methodist, and we often used to say to him when we would see a sheriff bringing in a bunch of prisoners, 'Brother Rownd, there comes some more Methodists.'"

SETTLED AT LAST

That the Police Court Jury Law is Constitutional.

The common pleas judges, after deliberating several days on the cases of Jacobi and Salisbury against the state, which was submitted to a full bench last week, handed down a decision this morning, Judge Harmon delivering the opinion of the court.

The cases at issue were of considerable importance for the reason they involved the validity of the much-talked-of police court jury law, of which readers of the Bee have been informed from time to time.

The court held that the law was constitutional; that the ordinance regulating the manner and method of selecting jurymen in police court provides that the jury shall be drawn from the city of Toledo; that the law providing for the election of city officials requires that the police judge shall be elected by the electors of the city of Toledo, therefore his jurisdiction must be confined to Toledo.

This practically decides the four-mile limit point raised, and the court refused to touch on this question, as it was not at issue.

A happy man is Alderman Potter over the decision, inasmuch as he opposed tinkering with the law in the council, notwithstanding the appeals made by City Solicitor Read.

THEY'RE AFTER HIM.

Squire Still in Hiding Lest He Be Called to Account.

Constable Armstead is having a high old time in hunting W. L. Squire, president of the Ohio republican league, who is wanted to give evidence in the defunct Toledo Republican club case. Squire has hunted his hole, and pulled the hole, it would seem, in after him.

It is a sweet-scented case, almost as much so as the odoriferous turtle itself. The turtle, by the way, reminds one of the old nursery saying:

"Mary, Queen of Scots, she walked and talked an hour after her head was off."

Improper punctuations give the phrase a totally different meaning from that intended. Lack of life caused the transformation in the turtle soup over which all the row is.

John Ryan for Senator.

To the Editor: A few days since the Blade abused John Ryan because a few of the lunatics in the asylum had met with a few mishaps. Now, in the name of common sense, what has John Ryan to do with anything that happens at the insane asylum?

John Ryan is a democrat, and worked with his party in regard to every change that may have been made at the asylum. Would not the republicans do the same?

I am a republican and shall vote the entire republican ticket with the exception of Ryan, whom I shall both vote for and support for the following reasons:

In the first place, Ryan has worked hard in the interests of the masses of the people.

Ryan has worked for legislation to reduce salaries to our public officers, thus saving thousands of dollars to the county and putting a check upon public stealing.

Ryan has at all times and in all places proved himself a strong friend to the laboring men and opposed to either monopoly or capital ruling the country.

Ryan is a workingman, a farmer, a self-made man, honorable in all his dealings, true to his friends and liberal with his enemies.

What do the men outside of the county care for the local interests of Lucas county? And the fact of our having no other candidate from this county for senator, Ryan should be elected and carry Lucas county by a large majority.

Party is played out. Vote for the men who have the interest and welfare of the people at heart, and not for the greedy, grinding capitalists who, by false promises and the use of a few paltry dollars think that they can carry elections to further their own avaricious ends.

Workingmen, vote for John Ryan for senator, the workingman's friend, and you will place a man in the senate that cannot be controlled by John Sherman, Wall street or any of the heartless gang who would have the laborer work for a dollar a day, and fatten upon his earnings.

Vote for the poor man's friend, John Ryan, and thus do your duty to yourselves and families.

London, Oct. 26.—The steamer Alaska, of the Guion line, from New York October 17 for Liverpool, arrived at Queenstown to-day.

TO SEE THE WORLD AGAIN.

Edward Kohout Will Soon be Pardoned.

Sentenced to the Penitentiary for Life for a Crime of Which He Was Not Guilty.

New York, Oct. 26.—Senator George F. Roesch, appointed by Gov. Hill to take testimony in the case of Edward Kohout, sentenced to life imprisonment for arson, completed his examination as referee on Saturday. A committee started for Albany last evening with the findings, which is that the man is innocent of the crime for which he is now serving sentence.

The brothers, Edward and Henry Kohout, were tried and convicted of jointly setting fire to their quarters in a tenement house to get the insurance. Four persons were killed. It now appears to the referee that Henry alone was guilty. Both brothers were sentenced for life.

LANG AND ROBISON

Meet the Council Committee But Do Not Agree.

The council committee to arbitrate the street car difficulties met at the council chamber Saturday afternoon, but failed to reach any agreement. Manager Lang submitted three proposals:

To pay half the cost of the Robison poles and suspension wires, and erect thereon a new wire, to be charged by the Consolidated.

To pay for half the cost of the poles and wires, including the trolley wire, and that each company should charge the trolley wire in its turn for a period of 30 days.

The Consolidated would pay half the cost of the Robison poles and wires, and that each company should charge its own wire, but all be used in common.

Mr. Robison would not consent to any of these. A proposition will be made by him to-morrow afternoon at 2:30.

M'KINLEY BUTTONS.

Prominent Republican Refuses to Support the Ticket or Wear the Button.

"Here is a card I received this morning," said a well-known and leading republican to a Bee this morning, "and as I have no use for it you may have it."

The postal was addressed to the Leading Republican Confectioner, Toledo, Ohio.

It was an advertisement relative to "American Tin Plate McKinley buttons," and came from Martin's Ferry.

"In the first place this American tin plate makes me tired," said the gentleman, "and in the next place I have no use for McKinley or his protective doctrines."

"Then you will not vote for him?"

"Not much. For the first time in my life I propose voting the democratic ticket."

He will not be the only Toledo republican who will vote it either.

MAJOR OVERMAN.

Protest Against His Removal by the Produce Exchange.

Hon. Harvey Platt this morning received a telegram stating that the war department proposed to remove Major Overman from charge of the harbor improvements in this locality. The telegram was taken to the produce exchange and the following was adopted:

"This exchange has been informed that the war department contemplated relieving Major L. Couper Overman, U. S. topographical engineer, from the charge of harbor improvements on Lake Erie; therefore be it

"Resolved, That at this juncture of the work in charge of Major Overman at this port, it is our judgment that these interests demand his continuance in charge of these improvements, and that a change at this time would prove adverse to the public interest."

SMART REGISTRARS

Who Did Not Think West Virginia Naturalization Papers Were Good.

On Saturday afternoon the registrars in one of the precincts of the Fifth ward made a ridiculous claim.

Mr. Christian Helstein appeared for the purpose of registering, and being a foreigner presented his naturalization papers. The registrars examined the document and discovered that it was issued by the circuit court of West Virginia, which, in the opinion of the registrars, was not good in Ohio!

It was necessary for the voter to secure a letter from the board of elections before he could register.

IN FREE TRADE IRELAND.

Since the McKinley bill went into effect 300 protected industries—industries which received special protection under the bill—have reduced the wages of employes.

The following cable shows how in free trade Ireland wages are voluntarily increased:

Dublin, Oct. 26.—The Ulster linen trade is so prosperous that the wages of the employes have been voluntarily increased by the employers.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

TORNADO INDICATIONS.

Prof. Hazen, U. S. Weather Bureau, Tells About Them.

On a quiet but very hot afternoon there suddenly appears in the southwest horizon an ominous greenish-black cloud; the sky is almost cloudless overhead and there is a gentle south wind blowing toward the general storm which almost invariably will be found to the northwest and about 400 miles away. Occasionally light, fleecy cirrus clouds, also generally from the south, pass far above one's head. Suddenly the black cloud draws near, preceded by a tremendous mass of dust, and a terrible roar, likened to "the bellowing of a million mad bulls," or to "the passage of ten thousand trains of cars through a tunnel," is heard. This characteristic roar is usually heard at least fifteen minutes before the arrival of the tornado, and in conjunction other signs gives ample warning of its approach.

This cause of this roar it is not easy to determine. It is like a continuous roar of thunder, it is without doubt some manifestation of electricity, and it has been heard in a violent thunder storm. The wind now blows violently from a western point, but it is hardly proper to say that it shifts to the west, as the cause of the west wind has no connection with that of the previous current from the south. Almost immediately the tornado, often ushered in by a fearful pelting of hail, is upon us. On the south side the destruction extends oftentimes to 1,000 feet or even a quarter of a mile, while on the north side one may stand with impunity within 400 or 500 feet of the greatest destruction.

The loss of life from tornadoes, it is believed, has been much exaggerated in the minds of most people. Professor Loomis, forty years ago, determined the average loss to be one to each tornado, and a more recent careful computation has shown that that estimate was not far wrong. An interesting comparison may be made between the loss of life by lightning and by tornadoes. During 1890 about 120 persons were killed by each, while, up to September 2, 1891, it is reported that 205 have been killed by lightning and only 95 by tornadoes. Deaths by lightning are scarcely noticed in the newspapers, while those in tornadoes are usually considered very much greater in number and are treated with far greater seriousness.

Can the energy of the tornado be diminished or be entirely dissipated? This is destined to be a most important question in our western states. If it is possible to dissipate water-spouts by concussions of gunpowder why may not the energy of a tornado be dissipated? Of course there would be a practical impossibility in making explosions just at the right time and place, but the plan does not seem to be entirely chimerical. It is believed that, in general, the existence of a large wooded country to the southwest and west of a town forms a good safeguard against the development of the most destructive tornadoes.

Since almost all the severer of these storms come from the southwest, it may sometime be found entirely feasible to station watchmen at the distance of a mile or two to the west and southwest who could give ample warning, for special strokes on a bell, when a tornado was likely to cross the town. The fact should never be lost sight of, however, and should allay a great deal of anxiety in the minds of the most timid, that all the severe tornadoes give ample warning of their approach.

The oldest college graduate in America so far as is known is Amos Andrew Parker, of Fitzwilliam, N. H. He is also the alumnus who has been graduated the greatest number of years from an American college. He graduated from the university of Vermont in 1813, and last week he celebrated his hundredth birthday. He is a finely preserved old gentleman, does not look to be more than 75, and reads, writes and gets about like a man of 50. His father, Nahum Parker, was a soldier in the revolutionary war, and afterward United States senator from New Hampshire, and for 20 years a judge of the court of common pleas. Two uncles of Amos were killed in the battle of Lexington.

THE SONG SERVICE

At the First Congregational Church—Choice Program Well Rendered.

An especially fine service of prayer, scripture and song was given at the First Congregational church last evening with an immense congregation in attendance. The service was of special interest, as it marked the seventieth birthday of the venerable and beloved pastor of the church, Rev. W. W. Williams, D. D.

The program included two solos by Mrs. Currier, one by Mr. Currier; solos by Miss Buck and Mr. Howell. Mendelssohn's Angel Trio, "Lift Thine Eyes," by Mrs. Currier, Miss Love and Miss Buck was especially well rendered, and the three sweet voices blended in beautiful harmony.

OCCUPATION OF EGYPT.

Constantinople, Oct. 26.—The porte has decided to again endeavor to reopen the question of the occupation of Egypt. Rustem Pacha has been instructed to approach Lord Salisbury, and ascertain whether he was willing to negotiate on a modified basis of the Wolffe convention. The Turks are not sanguine of a favorable decision, but hope to weary the British, and derive material advantage from their persistence.

MEMORIAL.

Oh, whiristrue, gra gal machree,
Art thou to Erin lost?
We'll miss thee from the Spartan band
Who faced the serried host.
No knight of velvet touch wert thou,
No sycophant to kneel
To lord or earl or Saxon churl—
Thou wert ever staunch and leal.

When others whom we trusted failed,
Paused, wavered, proved untrue,
We sought a man to fill the gap
And found him, Chief, in you.
Thy heart it throbbed for Erin, Chief,
With brain and tongue and pen
You waged the fight, for right 'gainst might,
Thou wert a man 'mongst men.

And when the darkest hour set in
And our bark was tempest tossed,
When angry waves came coming fast,
And the cause we loved seemed lost,
We found thee at the helm, Chief,
You wrought with might and main
Till the hidden reefs were safely passed
And the beacon gleamed again.

We need not marble, granite, bronze,
Nor work of sculptured art
To keep thy memory green, O Chief,
For in each loyal heart
That throbs with ardent fervor
To see the old land free
Thy name's entwined with immortelle,
Parnell, gra gal machree.

It is almost impossible to find on the peninsula of Delaware and Maryland a point 10 miles from navigable tide water. The whole region is cut up by navigable streams, and in the lower part of the peninsula small shipyards are found in many villages, and, indeed, often clear outside of village limits. There are many good shipwrights throughout the region, and for nearly two hundred years much of the produce has been carried in vessels built within a few miles of where it was grown.

One of the most copious springs in Great Britain is the famed St. Winifred's well, near the town of Holywell, in Flintshire. The well is an oblong square, about twelve feet by seven, and its water, say the people of the district, has never been known to freeze. This latter assertion may be true, as, besides containing a fair percentage of mineral matters that lower its freezing point, the well is inside a beautiful chapel, which was erected over it by Queen Margaret, the mother of Henry VII. The water thrown up is not less than eighty-four hogsheads every minute, and the quantity appears to vary very little either in drought or after the heaviest rain, showing doubtless that its primitive sources are numerous and widely distributed. St. Winifred's has been the object of many pilgrimages.

Jacksonville, Ill., Oct. 26.—Evidence has come to hand here that Miss Mamie Gregory of this city, who was married in Paris to J. P. Andrews of Grand Rapids, Mich., has been most cruelly deceived, Andrews having already a wife in an insane asylum near Detroit. The story is generally accepted as true by most people in this vicinity, and much sympathy is expressed for Miss Gregory.

The courtship, marriage and subsequent exposure of the true situation is not an uninteresting tale. Miss Gregory, who is the accomplished daughter of Mr. A. R. Gregory, a wealthy citizen and prominent republican, went abroad last spring to spend the summer sight seeing in England and on the continent. She had as a companion Miss Elizabeth Saunderson, also of this city.

Misses Gregory and Saunderson proceeded to New York, spent several days in the metropolis and then secured passage on one of the transatlantic lines for Liverpool. Among the first acquaintances made by the young ladies on shipboard was the gentleman from Grand Rapids, Mich., J. P. Andrews, whose conversation, manners and dress proclaimed him a member of polite society.

Old travelers say that there is nothing so violent as a sea voyage love affair. Andrews and Miss Gregory were thrown together from the very day of their introduction, and by the time Liverpool was reached both were head over heels in love. When Miss Gregory left the vessel Andrews left it with her. He was with her in the West of England, with her on the half dozen or more pleasant excursions that she made to quaint old English towns in the interior, and when she went to London he tagged along behind. They spent several weeks in the city, he being her escort everywhere and at all times. Miss Saunderson, the companion, seemed to take their friendship as a matter of course and did not trouble herself in the least about the consequences.

About the first of June Miss Gregory, tiring of London, resolved to go to Paris, and this she did, Andrews accompanying her, as a matter of course. Several weeks later, near the end of the month, Andrews came out boldly and asked her to become his wife, and, though she knew nothing whatever concerning his history except what he had told her, without informing her parents of the step she was about to take, she married him on the spot. They ended their stay in Paris in July and returned to New York, where they remained several weeks, visiting Newport and other watering places. In August they separated, she coming to Jacksonville and he returning to Grand Rapids.

In the meantime the marriage had been kept a profound secret, but, in some way or other, Miss Gregory's parents got wind of the affair several days ago and began to investigate it. Realizing that concealment was no longer possible the girl wired Andrews and he came to Jacksonville. This happened the latter part of last week. Despite the angry opposition of her father the pair left the city at once.

The sensational features of the case developed to-day through a dispatch from Grand Rapids, in which it is declared that Andrews is a bigamist. Several years ago he married the daughter of a wealthy Michigan lumberman, and by her has had two children. He was prominent both socially and politically in that city, and on several occasions has been entrusted with important missions to various European capitals as the representative of a large Michigan Mining company. Last spring his wife became insane and was incarcerated in a madhouse near Detroit, where she now is. It is said that Andrews has fled to Europe with his new wife, who is an heiress and owns a great deal of property in her own right.

THE M'KINLEY BILL.

The Briefs in the Test Case Prepared.

An Important Question to be Decided by the Supreme Court Next Month.

Washington, Oct. 26.—The brief for the United States in the cases of Boyd, Sutton & Co., H. Herman Sternbach & Co., and Marshall Field & Co., appellants v. the United States, has been prepared by the attorney-general. These are the cases in which the constitutionality of the McKinley tariff act are involved. These are among the cases set for hearing by the supreme court on the second Monday of November. The appellants contend that the act is unconstitutional because of the omission of the tobacco rebate clause in the bill, as it was signed by the president after having agreed to the conference, and because it contains the bounty and reciprocity clauses.

Concerning the first contentio, the attorney-general traces the course of the law through its enrollment and signature by the presiding officers of both houses, its approval by the president and its deposit with the secretary of state, in whose office it is carefully preserved, in obedience to express statutory injunction. This, he continues, is the ultimate record of the propaganda and constitutional passage of the law as therein contained and is the most appropriate evidence of which the court may take judicial notice in considering the existence and contents of the law, and if complete and regular, is not impeached by the entries upon the legislative journals of this evidence inconsistent therewith. Even if the enrolled act is but prima facie evidence of its existence and contents there is no other record by which it may be impeached, except the journals of the two houses, and in the case at the bar the journals do not show any discrepancy between the bill as it passed the two houses and the bill as it was approved. The evidence tending to show such discrepancy relied on by the appellants, is in parol, and can not therefore be considered by the court.

Conceding, however, the attorney-general says, that the tobacco rebate section was omitted from the bill after its passage and before its approval by the president, as is claimed by the appellants, this fact would not render invalid the remainder of the bill which did pass both houses and was approved by the president, for the reason that the rebate section and the approved bill were separable and independent of each other.

Concerning the incorporation in the bill of the sugar bounty clause, the attorney-general says it was for the purpose of encouraging the production of raw sugar in this country. Counsel, he says, assign the increase of duty on woolens, silks and cottons to the necessity for additional revenues to pay the sugar bounty. There is no more warrant for saying that the duties herein assessed were provided for by congress in this act to pay the sugar bounty than there would be for saying the same thing of the duty levied by the bill on any other merchandise. The question of the validity of bounties is as old as that of the protective tariff, and has been answered in the same way by constant legislation and acquiescence of the people as the nation itself has sanctioned both direct and indirect bounties for the encouragement of those industries which are closely allied with national growth and national independence as a public purpose and as within the power of congress.

The reciprocity clause, the attorney-general says, could not have been intended to increase the revenues. Its conditional enforcement precludes any such idea. The clause was an afterthought. It was not introduced until late in the session, after the bill had passed the house and had been discussed in the senate. It is wholly independent of every other clause in the bill and the bill or its passage or failure to pass had no bearing whatever upon the passage of the remainder. The clause is constitutional, he says. It is not a delegation of legislative power to the president but is only a legislative direction by which an alternative provision of existing law is made applicable to the happening of a fact, the existence of which is to eb determined by the president.

TYPE-SETTING MACHINES.

The Result of the Chicago Contest Will Be Held Back.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—The second week of the type-setting machine contest under the auspices of the American Newspaper Publishers' association has closed. During the past six days the machines have been operated for public exhibition and several hundred newspaper men from all parts of the country have visited Chicago to look into the merits of the four machines in the contest. Orders for each of the machines have been received during the week by the manufacturers. The report of the committee which conducted the contest during the first week will not be ready until some time in November, when it will be sent out from the New York office of the American Newspaper Publishers' association.

During the past week the cold stereotyping process has also been shown and worked with great success.

MARLOWE TO-NIGHT.

She Will Be Greeted by a Big House.

Miss Gale in "As You Like It," Wednesday—Ullie Akerstrom at the People's—Concert at Leland's.

There has been a large sale of seats for Julia Marlowe at the Wheeler Opera House this evening and to-morrow. Cymbeline will be produced to-night and Ingomar to-morrow. Mis Marlowe has a wonderful talent and seems to appear best in the most difficult characters. In whatever character she appears, she always has the true conception of the part and her acting is easy and natural. Miss Marlowe is but a young woman for the place she occupies in the theatrical world, but her talent is exceptional and she is constantly rising. She has received unusually good notices from the press this season wherever she has appeared and she is surrounded with a very strong company.

Of Miss Marlowe as Imogen the Wheeling Register has the following to say of her performance in that city:

"To portray such a character as this requires exceptional gifts and unusual graces of person. Those who saw Miss Marlowe in the role of Imogen last night, could but feel that this young actress was carefully fitted by nature to give substantial form to the finer female creations of the idyllic classic drama. In Imogen is a revelation of a new phase of Miss Marlowe's dramatic temperament, and she proved through a rendition of last night that she is capable of portraying with touching fidelity the emotions of a chaste and poetic nature. Youth, beauty, intelligence, sympathetic nature and culture constitute some of the necessary qualifications of an actress who would successfully essay this character. Miss Julia Marlowe has all these. Though she is scarcely over twenty-five years of age, yet is possessed of a mind mature discriminating and sprightly. Her beauty is not only of form and feature, but is rendered more attractive by an exceedingly intelligent expression. As the character of Imogen was developed by her surroundings, so it was exhibited by Miss Marlowe."

Miss Gale Coming.

The pleasures of the theatrical season are to be much enhanced by the appearance at the Wheeler of a talented actress who was so long leading lady for Booth and Barrett. There need be no extended introduction as Miss Gale is already too well-known and liked here to require it. Her friends claim that she is generously equipped with both brains and beauty, and the prolonged training she received while with Booth and Barrett, combined with her own ability and assisted by an excellent company, including Mr. Creton Clarke, and a strong repertoire of plays, will enable her to achieve success. Miss Gale comes to Toledo Wednesday evening for an engagement of one night and will be seen as Rosalind in "As You Like It."

Ullie Akerstrom.

This delightful young actress opens a week's engagement at the People's tonight and during her engagement will present a pleasing repertoire of good plays.

To-night and to-morrow will be presented "A Little Busybody," the leading part of which has been created by Miss Akerstrom. In this piece is introduced a realistic river scene and Miss Akerstrom also makes a thrilling leap trough a glass window of real glass. "Annette, the Dancing Gir l and "Renah, the Gypsy's Daughter," will be put on during the week.

Concert at Leland's

A delightful entertainment is promised at Leland's Art store this evening, to consist of a concert by the best musical talent of the city for the benefit of St. Mark's church. The program includes Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Hascall in piano duet, Mr. Adrian Primrose in violin solos, Mrs. Ainsworth in soprano solos, Miss Rose Clouse, piano solo; Mrs. Scammel, contralto solo, and Mrs Ainsworth and Mrs. Scammel in a duet.

THEY BURIED STEINMETZ.

Prisoners' Love for a Fellow Criminal.

A Collection Taken Up Among the Convicts to Give the Toledo Murderer a Decent Funeral.

Columbus, O., Oct. 26.—Philip Steinmetz, the oldest prisoner in the penitentiary, who died Friday, was buried Saturday in Calvary cemetery here, Rev. Father Logan, who looks after the spiritual welfare of the Catholic prisoners, conducting the services.

Steinmetz left no relatives who would look after his remains, and sooner than see the body turned over to a medical college, as the law provides in such cases, the convicts determined that the old man, who had served nearly a quarter of a century behind the walls, and endeared himself to many by his gentle disposition, should at least have a decent burial. They therefore raised a collection among themselves, the amount realized aggregating $60.

E. L. Harper, whom old Philip served faithfully as janitor in the secretary's office, where the ex-Fidelity banker is employed, headed the list with a contribution of $5, the other contributions ranging from 25 cents to $2. Riley Brown, a 15-year man from Franklin county, who is serving his third term, contributed $10.

WEARY MOTHERS

LOOK AT THIS.
Are these not healthy and bright children? Their appearance does not misrepresent them; they are both healthy and bright. They are the son and daughter of Mr. J. P. Wiley of Dorchester, Mass., and he has an interesting story to tell in regard to them. The story is as follows:
"In 1885 my wife, accompanied by my little boy, at that time 11 months old, was visiting relatives in Scranton, Penna. The little fellow was suffering untold agony cutting his teeth. My wife was told to try Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion. The effect was magical. It did not stupefy the child, as most remedies of this character do; it simply soothed the pain of the burning and aching gums. I might write a volume, had I the time, praising this remedy, and then not express my feelings or do it justice. It is simply marvelous. After her return to Boston she wanted another bottle, but I found that it was unknown in this city. I corresponded with Dr. Hand, and received in reply a sample of each of his remedies. I used them on both my children, recommended them to all my friends, and have yet to find the person who, after using the remedies, especially Teething Lotion and Colic Cure, that could not praise them. People may say, and have said to me, 'Oh, there must be something in that Teething Lotion that affects a child's brain.' In reply to this, I will say I have two children, a boy and girl, who have been treated with Teething Lotion since time of beginning to end of teething, and I challenge any person to furnish two with any clearer brains. I cheerfully recommend them to parents who love their little ones."

A PEARL FARM.

An Ohio Man's Unique Experiment with Mussels.

Growing the Mollusks on Poles and Introducing Bits of Wax as the Foundation for the Pearl—His Success.

The idea of a pearl farm is unique, but such a thing exists, says a New York letter to the New Orleans Picayune, and the only one in the world, so far as is known in the United States. We have had in New York, recently, on his way home from Europe, Charles L. Moore, the pearl farmer of Ohio. Mr. Moore, as I understand it, has simply utilized the discovery for which Linnaeus the great naturalist was knighted more than a century ago. He observed that the common mussels in fresh rivers covered any foreign substance that got imbedded in their shells with the pearly exudation known as nacre, and saw no reason why real pearls should not be produced by that process. Experiments convinced him that it was feasible and in 1879 he established a mussel farm on the Ohio river, about forty miles from Cincinnati. He grew his mussels on poles, as oysters are grown in some places, so that he can draw them up and inspect them at pleasure. As the fresh water mussel is never eaten and is regarded as utterly valueless, there was much speculation among the people round about as to what this systematic cultivation of the homely mullusk meant, and it was finally decided that Moore must belong to the genus crank. The object of curiosity, being endowed with Yankee shrewdness and pertinacity, kept his own counsel, watched his pets patiently and bided his time. He had to place something inside the mussel's shell in such a way that it could not be ejected. The mussel would then at once begin to cover the intrusive and perhaps irritating article with the same substance that formed the lining of its shell. More than that, the process once begun must continue until the foreign growth got large enough to be ejected or caused the mussel's death.

Now the foundation of the pearl of commerce is a grain of sand or a fragment of shell, but experiment and possibly prescience persuaded Mr. Moore that a bit of wax would answer the purpose better for the cultivated pearl and form an equally good foundation. It was a commonsense notion certainly that the plastic wax would not lacerate the delicate tissues nor injure the mussels as a hard substance would, and it resulted successfully, for after 12 years of the most painstaking cultivation the pearl farm had begun to bear and the product is all that could be wished. As to his experiment and its result Mr. Moore says:

"There is no secret about it. All that is needed is a piece of good river bottom, the mussels and patience—more of the latter than anything else. When I first started I had little faith in the pearl producing qualities of the mussel, but as I was in poor health and unable to attend to any regular business, I went ahead. For a long time I had to endure the jibes of my neighbors because I would not tell what I intended to do with my crop when it was ready to be harvested. It was hard work, for, to tell the truth, I was exceedingly dubious myself; but before two years had passed I was satisfied that I could grow just as good pearls as Mother Nature, and now I am egotistical enough to think that I am a rather better workman in this line than that ancient and reliable dame.

"At first the work was very slow and most discouraging, but I stuck to it. I was very clumsy in handling my pets and fully one-half of those whose shells I pried open in order to introduce a grain of sand died. That did not pay at all, for I lost both my time and my mussels. I tried many different substances as pearl centres with no better success, until at last I hit upon wax. That proved to be the right thing, and with constant practice I became so proficient that I regard myself as quite an expert now. I cannot only insert the wax foundation without hurting my little workman, but can also take out the pearl when it is as large as I want it, and give him a new piece of wax for another. I have fifty of the fellows well into their second year on pearl number two and have lost only one of them. I have a fine set of instruments made for brain operations which I use in handling the mussels, and have got so that I can tell just where to look for the pearl every time.

"There is not the slightest danger of overloading the market and depreciating the value of pearls. I cannot make my workers move fast enough for that. For my twelve years of labor I have only about 400 perfect pearls to show. They are fine though and worth from $100 to $500 apiece, or say $100,000 for the lot. That's not bad for twelve years of work on a farm of less than one acre. Beside, the farm has only just come into bearing, and I expect to get from fifty to one hundred pearls every year from now on. I cannot produce pearls as large as those of legendry times that were hollowed out and used for drinking cups, but I can make them of average size as they run nowadays, and what is more important, I can make them different colors. One of my finest specimens in a pear-shaped pink pearl worth at least $1,000. I sent a mate to it that was a little more spherical to the Smithsonian Institute in Washington. They would not believe that the gem had been grown to order, so to speak, but sent a scientist out to my farm to investigate, and he remained incredulous until he saw me take a pearl out of one of my molds and put it back again. Then he wanted to know about the different colors, and I showed him several specimens which had been made to partake of the general tinge of the interior of the shell. Thus by selecting interiors of different tinges I have produced white, black, pink and occasionally green pearls.

"I do not regard my process as patentable, because it did not really originate with me, and I am not afraid of competition, because pearl growing as a profession requires too much time and skill for many to engage in it. The average man wants a quick return for his money, and that is something which he absolutely cannot get in pearl farming. The only one I know beside Linnaeus and myself who has undertaken pearl cultivation is Alfred Fredericks, son of the well-known New York photographer. He succeeded in raising pearls at his home on the Passaic River, between Summit and Chatham, N. J., and had some success, producing a black one of considerable value. He was a mere lad at the time, and, as he has turned his attention to electricity since, I fancy he has gone out of the pearl business for good."

HARLEQUIN REED.

He Insults the Farmer and Laughs at His Woes.

Tom Reed, in his Music hall speech last Wednesday night, admitted without hesitation, like the bold man he is, that our farms are deserted. But a little matter like this doesn't trouble Tom at all.

"Why does a man desert one of these farms?" he asks. "Is it to go to a worse place? It must be to go to a better one. Why is it that nobody goes to take the deserted farm? Mustn't it be because nobody thinks he can better himself by so doing? This farm, then, is deserted, and remains deserted because men can do better elsewhere." Thus speaks Thomas, of Maine.

A little later on, in the same speech, he just as readily admitted that our commerce has left the seas.

But this is another trifling matter that doesn't trouble the genial and rollicking Reed in the least. Our sailors, just like our farmers, have left their occupation because they have gone to a better place.

Now that the complacent Tom has driven these people alike from the land and the sea, the question naturally arises, "Where have they gone?" If they have left the solid land and the tossing ocean, to what mysterious bourne have the wanderers travelled?

But this question is not one for us to ask. It is enough for us, says Tom Reed, to know that they are happier now; that they have gone to a better place, and that they are better off.

All this sounds familiar, does it not? We have all heard these same consolatory words at funerals. In the last extreme of hopeless despair they are used as the only balm for the tortured spirit of the sad survivors. "He has gone to a better place," says the funeral preacher; "he is happier now; he is better off."

Tom Reed is a jolly man, but he makes a pathetic figure of heroic size standing at the funeral of New England's farming and shipping and iron industries, speaking words of ineffectual consolation. Sadly he bows himself over the remains of our agriculture and commerce, which, before they were killed by high tariff laws, were two vigorous twin brothers, working together in lusty life. His voice chokes with tears, and all he can murmur to the mourners is, "They are happier now. They have left us, but they have gone to a better place."

Gov. Russell, in his blunt way, blurted it right out, and said certain New England industries were dead. Now, this is no consolation whatever to the bereaved mourners. It only harrows up their grief.

How much more softly and tenderly Tom Reed treats the matter! He knows they are dead, as well as Gov. Russell. But he comes with the balm of peace and the ointment of consolation. He does not brutally parade the fateful fact that they are dead. He simply makes the sweet assertion that they have "gone to a better place"—which means Pennsylvania or Ohio.

As a funeral orator, it must be admitted that Tom Reed is much more comforting, much more consolatory than Gov. Russell. As one by one other industries that are pining for free raw material fade and wither under the simoon breath of the McKinley tariff, let us call in this soothing and comforting man to officiate over the remains.

He will stand above their coffins with that sweet, ineffable smile of his, and make it a delightful pleasure to attend the funeral.

"GRANDER THINGS."

The barley sheaves lay scattered thickly in the south field at little Brookside farm, the shining sickle reposed on the latest banded bundle and the reaper sat down by the friendly linden to rest.

The barley was at last reaped and he was so weary; weary of soul as well as limb. He sighed and drew his sleeve slowly across his aching eyes.

"O, I don't know," he said. But what he did know remained a secret for the moment, for he folded his arms over his knees and, resting his head on them, sat quite still.

The birds chattered in the branches overhead, peeping wonderingly down at the bowed figure, the summer wind came across the tender aftermath and touched the silvered head, the shadows crept up from the wood-lot below, marking the edge of the evening on the bearded sheaves but the tired reaper made no sign.

Just across the brook, from which the place took its name, the smoke curled up from the chimney of his own humble cottage. There was an orchard and a big cluster of maples intervening, however, and half hid the home nest.

In the quaint, low-ceiled kitchen a quiet motherly looking woman busied herself preparing the evening meal.

After she had put the tea-kettle over and pulled out from the wall a small table with rasping sound, she went to the door and gazed across toward the barley field.

"I should guess that William has finished the reapin'," she said, shading her eyes from the evening sun, that she might catch sight of the reaper, "but I don't know."

She went back to the table then, spread the cloth, took from the high walnut cupboard two blue-edged plates and put them down opposite each other on the board.

For a moment she stood irresolute. "I don't know," she mused, "maybe it isn't bein' wilful against Providence to keep just right on hopin' and expectin'; so I guess I'll set on the other plate, once more any way."

Swallowing a great lump in her throat, she continued. "Seems more like as if we hadn't forgotten Jimmy when the other plate is on. And I guess God will forgive my hopin' even if the boy never comes."

Brushing away the gathering tears, she took the third plate and put it on the table just as she had done for ten years—ten long, weary, lonely years.

"Seems as if—but then I don't know."

Here she stopped short and took the old dinner-horn down from its accustomed place by the long rows of shining tins, and going to the door blew the usual mellow notes which had called "Wilyum to his meals" nigh unto forty years.

But a decade ago, lighter feet had bounded over the stile in answer to its summons, also, and Jimmy's merry whistle had sounded up over the hill, a glad prelude the homecoming. But to-night there was only "Wilyum" to hear, and the thought of it melted the last notes into a mournful quaver as the horn left the withered lips.

And William heard and noting the softer cadence, understood.

"Ah; yes," said he. "I know why wife Jane let all the cheerful go out o' them notes at the windin' up; she's thinkin' o' Jimmy."

He got up, straightened his cramped limbs, took up his sickle and went slowly down between the rows of barley sheaves in answer to the call.

"It has been a long time," murmured he, "since the boy got out o' patience with his pore old father and mother and the 40-acre farm, and left us all for 'grander things' he said."

"I know it isn't much of a place," he went on in a tone of apology as he snipped a rank touch-me-not in the fence corner with the sickle, "but I've made a good livin' off of it for years—a right good livin'; and it does seem to me that Jimmy orter staid and took keer o' his pore old father and mother when they needed him most; seems to me, but then I don't know."

He came up the path where the hollyhocks nodded stiffly at him and paused, hanging his hat on a peg he proceeded to bathe his care-lined face in a tin basin near by.

"I don't know," he said again, and looked toward his wife while he wiped his brows with the crash towel at hand and smoothed his thin gray hair. "Ah! I don't know for sure, wife Jane; but it seems to me that the older we grew the lonesomer we get."

A wistful look came over the motherly face and a sigh escaped her lips, but she did not reply. She only rattled the cups, arranged the spoons with more care and was silent.

The old couple with bowed heads sat quietly for a moment saying "grace;" the soft wind came through the open door touching each silvered crown like the kiss of benediction and, like an omen of good, the sun's last rays lay brightly on the unturned plate.

The old man poured out his tea and glanced at the plate in the sunshine.

"It seems an awful while since Jimmy went away," he said; "eight or ten years isn't it, wife?"

"Ten years to-morrow," she answered, and a tear plashed down on the white cloth. "And we have not heard from him for nigh onto six years, I think," resumed the father. "Got careless, I s'pose—they all do after they're gone awhile—don't think of the old folks much, but then, I don't know."

By and by the supper dishes were cleared away, the unused plate put back in the tall cupboard and "wife Jane" took up her knitting.

Then she went out to sit by "Willyum" on the door-step and rest and kind of finish up the evening.

The husband smoked his pipe in silence and watched the twilight gather over the harvest sheaves in the lot beyond the brook.

"To-morrow I'll bring in the barley," said he after a long silence, "and then I'm done. Some way I feel to-night that it's the last reapin' God requires of me. I had no idea, when I was young, that one aged so fast; but in them days I didn't know."

He took the clay pipe between his thumb and finger, knocked out the ashes against the door-stone, got up and went in.

Wife Jane crossed her hands in her lap; a great fear swept across her heart-strings and awoke a slumbering pain.

Father had never spoken like that before and he was never so strangely quiet before. Father in heaven! could it be that——?

"Mother!" A tall form came wearily around the corner of the cottage in the semi-darkness and paused beside her; but she stirred not.

"Mother!" he said in trembling voice, "I've come home; won't you forgive me and bid me welcome? Where is father?"

"Wife Jane" got up in a bewildered way and kissed her absent son in silence. After a bit she said, "Jimmy, I've nothin' to forgive. But, we have missed you so; have wanted you so much all these years. O, father will be so glad!"

And the poor old happy mother wept on the broad shoulder of the returned prodigal.

"Father's growin' old terrible fast," she sobbed out presently, "terrible fast since you left us, Jimmy. I'm a-thinkin' he can't last long; he's mourned for you so that he's all broken down."

"Willyum," she called softly, but he did not hear. "Will—yum," she repeated. "Jimmy's come."

But the weary old father did not appear to welcome the long absent son.

"I s'pose he's pulled his shoes and gone to lie down a spell," the mother said in a pained, frightened way, going into the house.

The wayward Jimmy followed her closely with fast-beating heart.

"He's just finished the reapin' of the barley to-day," she continued, as together they crossed the empty rooms, "and seems like he was clear give out."

Mother and son sought the quaint little bedroom in search of the patient, long waiting father. "Wife Jane" was right; he had "pulled his shoes" and was resting.

"Father, I have come back to you." The voice faltered through the sentence, and Jimmy, stooping in the shadows, touched the father's brow with trembling fingers.

"It's Jimmy, is it? Ah, Jimmy, my boy, you have come, have you? And did you find the—grander things, Jimmy—grander than Brookside, eh? But I've finished the reapin' to-day, Jimmy lad, and to-morrow, I guess—no, to-night, we can bring in the sheaves, you and I, Jimmy; you and I."

His voice sounded tired and strange and faraway. They raised him up, but he wanted to lie down to rest a little before he brought in the sheaves.

So they put him back among the pillows, gently with loving caress and he went to sleep.

The barley sheaves were ungathered on the morrow; they lay thickly scattered amid the greening stubble where they had fallen from the weary reaper's hand.

Out beyond the brook, among the daisies and under the trees, they prepared for him a resting place.

He was right. God did not want him to reap more; the friendly linden in the south field cast its shadows no more over the bowed figure and the birds missed him, too; but he had solved the problem, and the things he "didn't know are made plain at last."

"Wife Jane" lays the table for three at Brookside, still; but the unturned plate is opposite her own now, and father's chair stands guard over it.

"For company like," she explains when it is noticed; you see we are so lonesome for Willyum, Jimmy and I."

But the son's face wears a grieved expression as he tills the 40-acre farm, and the "grander things" grow strangely insignificant. And sometimes his bread seems bitter.

MEDICINE IN JAPAN.

The Virtues of Oyster-Shell Tonic, Tobacco Juice, and Other Remedies.

If Dr. B. J. R. Matsumoto is to be believed, Japan has more doctors to the square mile than any other country in the world.

Fifty years ago the followers of the ancient school, which Dr. Matsumoto designates as the school of nonsense, flourished on the island. They knew absolutely nothing of the interior of the human frame as now reviewed from a medical standpoint. Still they performed wonderful cures. It may be well for the enervated or prostrated to know how simply doctors of the old school used to cure cases such as theirs, or at least gain the reputation of so doing. When these doctors wanted to give a badly run-down patient a tonic that would make him feel as vigorous as a base ball pitcher in the first inning, they carefully broke up an old oyster shell, steeped the pieces in water for half an hour and gave a teaspoonful of water three times a day. When assisted by a robust imagination and a rhubarb pill these potent doses were never known to fail. At least so the Japanese grandmothers declare.

With the advent of Germans and Hollanders, who taught the young idea how to write prescriptions and saw off legs, there was at once a great diminution in the ranks of the old-school physicians with their oyster shell tonics. They gave way to a terrible army that went about with lancets bleeding sick people right and left.

"Bleeding is not so bad when done in moderation," said Dr. Matsumoto, "but to turn a big school of medical graduates loose with their lances was, as one might say, a national calamity, for it depleted the blood of the people to an alarming extent. Then, too, the surgical work was of a very severe order. Limbs were lopped off without hesitation, and the new doctors seemed to take a certain kind of delight—purely professional, of course—in their sawing and hacking. When a Japanese native became afflicted with any disease in his limbs he was afraid to summon medical aid, for he might lose a leg or arm if he were only suffering from a plain attack of rheumatism. The ancient system of surgery, which was no surgery at all, was voted by the people to be better than stumping around on wooden legs or using hooks for hands.

Speaking of the ancient manner of treating mangled limbs, the doctor said that it mainly consisted in pouring alcohol or other strong liquids upon the wounds, or else binding moist tobacco into the raw places. The test of the efficacy of these applications lay in the contortions of the patient. If he did not writhe and jump about, screaming in agony when he felt the raw spirits or penetrating tobacco juice upon his mangled flesh—and he generally did—it was a signal that something more powerful was needed in the way of antiseptics. In fact, the treatment was anything to rouse the sufferer from patient endurance to a state of unbearable torture. And yet even this was considered by many natives as better than the other way of hacking and sawing.

But lance and bone-saws have been laid away, and the school which now holds sway resorts to them only when it is deemed absolutely necessary.—San Francisco Chronicle.

RESCUED FROM THE DEPTHS OF MISERY.

The misery endured by unfortunates whose livers are derelict in duty is unspeakable. Sick headaches, nausea, costiveness, disorder of the digestive apparatus, heartburn, vertigo, unrest, sourness of the breath, uneasiness beneath the short ribs and right shoulder blade, fickle appetite, are among the hateful indicia of billiousness, which, however, speedily vanish when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is employed as a regulator. Most effectually is its work of disciplining carried out, as a complete renewal of the digestive secretive and evacuative functions satisfactorily proves. In cases of malarial disease the liver is the principal gland involved, and for maladies of a malarial type Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is an absolute specific. As a laxative—painless but effective—it is unrivalled, and it is an admirable preventive of chronic kidney trouble and rheumatism, and a superb general tonic and corrective.

IN TRADING CIRCLES

Wheat Quotations for the Day—Price Current for Produce and Other Articles.

London wheat market very firm; held higher in all positions. Corn firm. Liverpool wheat quiet, unchanged. Corn firm and higher.

The receipts of wheat at seven principal western points to-day are 1,629,929 bu., compared with 880,929 bu. on the same day last year.

Wheat Stocks.—Toledo increased 161,267 bu; New York increased 1,443,831 bu.

Shipments of wheat from India last week equaled 920,000 bu. Previous week, 720,000 bu. From April 1, the commencement of the crop year, to October 21, 37,220,000 bu, compared with 20,400,000 bu in the corresponding period in 1890.

Bradstreet's Report of Exports.—For 17 weeks of the current cereal year exports from 11 United States ports equal 70,175,000 bu., against 30,171,000 bu. from the United States and Canada in 17 weeks of 1890, and as compared with 33,318,000 bu. shipped from the United State alone in a like portion of 1889, with 37,179,000 bu. in 1888 and with 55,893,000 bu. in the like 17 weeks in 1887. From the United States alone this week exports of wheat and flour, both coasts, aggregated 5,600,271 bu., as compared with 4,033,447 bu. the week before.

Total available stocks of wheat, both coasts, United States and Canada, October 17, amounted therefore to 54,466,298 bu., as compared with 39,934,590 bu. just one year previously, the increase this year as compared with last amounting to 14,531,708 bu., or 36.4 per cent.

Chicago "Bulletin."—A private London cable says: "Have received information from Russia confirming the report of the prohibition of export corn, oats and barley."

The New York "Financial Chronicle" reports gross earnings of 88 railroads for the second week in October increased $591,113, or 6.82 per cent.

The Exports from Russia.—It is reported that Russia exported in the year ending July 31 last, 65,000,000 bus. oats, 20,000,000 bus. corn and 50,000,000 bus. of barley.

Prime's Weekly Crop Report says: Winter wheat situation to-day I think may be practically summed up as follows: That north of the Ohio river the crop is now all in the ground. That in Michigan, Ohio, and Indiana is backward, hardly having made a stand yet. That there is some insect development in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana. No insects are reported in Illinois. A year ago at this time these states all presented an almost perfect condition for growth, and the prospects for going into winter quarters were strong, healthy, and vigorous. In Missouri and Kansas seeding is still in progress. A reduced acreage, and general prospects not as good as a year ago. In Tennessee and Kentucky there are dry conditions and the crop is backward. With a mild, open, wet November there may be a decided improvement with the conditions which exist to-day, but that is purely guess-work. Farmers are selling very little wheat, the grain being kept back for higher prices, and also on account of general crop conditions.

The receipts of wheat to-day at seven principal western points are 740,891 bu in excess of the corresponding Monday in 1890.

The export clearances Saturday were 310,352 bu of wheat and flour to an aggregate of 410,000 bu. The exports of corn were 114,946 bu.

English markets as reported herein are firm and held higher in London, and quiet and unchanged in Liverpool for wheat. Corn dearer.

Our Exports.

Bradstreets makes our exports for seventeen weeks 70,200,000 bus. We think the agricultural department makes the quantity still greater. But on Bradstreets basis it is 215,000,000 bus. per annum. We may have as much as that to export if we clean out the entire crop. As to the basis, or aggregate crop, nothing is settled. Amateurs make it from 580 millions to 635 millions.

Of the unprecedented exports of wheat in 17 weeks the United Kingdom has not been a large buyer, and her stock on the ocean has decreased from June 29 to October 18, 7,416,000 bu. At the latter date the stock was 14,624,000 bus., against 14,256,000 bu at corresponding date in 1890. It is believed that England is now in our markets as a free buyer.

Acreage in Wheat.

The acreage of wheat sown this fall to date is considerably less than last year, and in consequence of inadequate moisture the crop is not in a healthy condition to go into the winter. A wet and mild November may effect a change in this respect, but a mild November cannot be relied on. The plowing in Minnesota and the Dakotas for spring wheat is reported as far less than usual. The result of postponing it until spring may decrease the acreage very largely.

The week opens on falling markets for wheat. The receipts are too large for buyers' comfort and happiness, and the accumulations as per visible supply talk are too large. Added to these elements of weakness that foreign markets are lower, and it about covers the reasons for the break.

Corn has been very strong all day and closes decidedly higher.

In New York October and December wheat close 7-8c lower. October corn 2c, and November 1 1-8c higher. October oats 5-8c lower.

In Chicago December wheat closed 1-2c lower, October corn 1 3-4c, and November 1 1-8c higher. October oats 1-4c lower.

In Toledo—The trading in wheat futures has been moderately active, especially for December, and at a lower range of prices. On the call December sold at 99 1-8c to 99c, and May at $1 05. After the call December sold at 99c to 99 1-8 and declined steadily to 98 3-8, a loss of 7-8c; May sold at $1 05 and closed at $1 04 3-8, a loss of 7-8c.

Cash wheat was dull to-day and the sales were light. The market closes 1c lower; No. 2 soft sold at 97 to 97 1-2; No. 3 soft at 94 to 94 1-4; No. 4 soft at ... ed No. 1 at 86 to 89, according to location; No. 2 at 79; No. 2 hard at 94 1-2; No. 3 hard at 87 1-2; No. 2 white at 94.

Corn, No. 2 at about 57 1-2; No. 3 at 56. Oats, No. 2 at 30 1-2; No. 3 at 28 1-2; No. 2 white at 32 1-2. Rye was 1-2 dearer at the close; No. 2 at 89 to 89 1-2; No. 3 at 85 1-2.

Clover seed was more active and about unchanged. Prime for cash at $4 55; December at $4 62 1-2@4 60; January at $4 65; No. 2 at $4 20@4 35.

The visible supply of wheat increased in the week 3,605,900 bu. corn decreased 1,022,000 bu; oats increased 171,000 bu. In the corresponding week in 1890 wheat increased 1,108,000 bu; corn decreased 1,054,000 bu; oats decreased 203,000 bu.

Seed Market.

The receipts of this commodity at Toledo last week were 2,895 bags, shipments 587 bags. In the corresponding week in 1890 the receipts were 2,914 bags, shipments 2,658 bags. Since Sept. 1 the receipts have been 27,543 bags, and the shipments 6,250 bags.

The exports from New York for the week ending Oct. 17 were 1,455 bags, and since Sept. 1 11,399 bags, compared with 12,994 bags in the corresponding period in 1890.

The exports from Baltimore May 1 to Oct. 24, inclusive, were 33,274 bu clover, 30,039 bu timothy, 172,557 bu flax, 20,561 bu grass.

The tone of speculation was firm during the first 30 minutes, and under the lead of Michigan Central prices advanced 1-8 to 1 1-4 per cent. The market was much less active after 11 o'clock and positive weakness was developed throughout the list. The fluctuations, however, were for the most part insignificant. The decline was large enough to wipe out the early gains and something in addition. Tennessee Coal was the weakest. After its price had advanced from 39 1-4 to 40 1-2 it suddenly dropped to 39. The market at noon was stagnant, with prices generally below those of Saturday. At this writing there is very little doing. The sales to noon amounted to 96,500 shares.

FOUR SMALL FIRES.

Four small fires occurred Saturday night, keeping the department busy. The first alarm came about 6 o'clock, and was caused by a small blaze at Mirmine's foundry, which was easily extinguished with a damage of about $50. Number two was about midnight, in the rear of G. F. Danielson's residence on Fifteenth street, near Oak, and caused a damage of a few hundred dollars, fully insured. About 3 o'clock this morning the department was called to Frey's book store on Monroe street, where a small fire was caused by the electric wires. BROUGHT BACK FOR TRIAL

A Gay Pair of Crooks Caught in the Woods.

Where They Had Passed as High-Toned Hunters.

Henry McGlathery and Charles Case Arrested in Maine for Stealing Seven Thousand Dollars in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—Detectives Miller and Tate yesterday arrived with the fugitive embezzlers and forgers, Henry McGlatherly and Chas. Chase, who got away with $7,000 belonging to Conveyancer Alfred Fitler, brother of the ex-mayor.

The fellows were caught at Kennebago camp, in Maine, where they wandered since their flight from Philadelphia on Oct. 3.

The fugitives were playing high toned roles as hunters. McClathery has $3,750 of the stolen money on him, and both wore diamonds, gold watches and other fineries. They had purchased a complete hunting outfit and were armed with rifles, revolvers and bowie knives.

In their adventures in Maine they met two sons of Claus Spreckels, the sugar king, passed over the Canadian line, lost themselves for days in the Maine forests and imagined they were entirely secure. When the detectives nabbed them they confessed everything.

Three women who went as far as Boston with the men were a daughter of a dead Boston minister named Coyle and her mother and Ella Walters, of Westchester. The women divulged the secret of the direction the fugitives took. The Coyle woman was married to McGlathery before the flight, but McGlathery was so drunk at the time that he does not remember the occasion or who performed the ceremony although he admits they were married.

In their written confessions the men attribute their downfall to Gloucester's iniquities—wine and women.

MADE A GOOD HAUL.

Daring Robbery in Omaha this Morning.

Street Car Company's Officers Held Up While the Safe in the Building Was Being Entered.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 26.—A daring robbery was committed here early this morning by four men who held up the superintendent of the street railway and two assistants in their office in the Ames avenue barn at 1 a. m., and blew up the safe, securing $1,200 with which they made off.

The explosion was heard by employes in the barn who rushed to the office but were met by the barrels of revolvers and ordered back.

The telephone line had been cut so that the alarm could not be given to the city and the burglars had a good start before the police got after them.

MOST PEOPLE

Know only a comparatively few things thoroughly—all else is more or less uncertain.

Take your own case. What do you know about CARPETS, for instance? Are you competent to detect poor materials, or imperfect weaving, or unreliable colorings, or old-style patterns?

No.

Then will it not be wisdom on your part to make your purchases of CARPETS where all these points are taken care of in your interest, and where you are protected, not only from direct misrepresentation, but from the results of your own inexperience?

That seems plain enough.

Just two things we promise every customer. They are these:

That every salesman shall tell the whole truth about every piece of goods offered for sale; that anything which proves imperfect, through the appearance of any hidden defect subsequent to purchase, shall be made right.

The name of our firm stands behind these two guarantees.

Very likely you are thinking of purchasing one or more CARPETS shortly. If so, consider what we have said.

Dear Sir—It is with pleasure that I testify to the virtue of your Asthma Cure. Fancy Silks— LAMSONS'.

TO ALL ORGANIZED LABORERS AND THEIR FRIENDS.

Brewers' Union, No. 60, of Toledo, believing themselves obliged to take action against the sale of the Milwaukee Pabst beer, lately introduced in Toledo, base their opposition to it on the following reasons:

That Pabst's brewery is a scab brewery. That the national secretary, who, on the occasion of the convention in St. Louis, paid a visit to Milwaukee in order to organize there a brewers' union, had to leave without attaining his end.

That, on the other hand, the brewery owners of Toledo have fully and entirely recognized the union and fulfilled their contract in every respect; wherefore we consider it to be the duty of our union to uphold and promote the interests of the same.

For these reasons we say to all who like to drink a glass of good beer, and who are friends of organized labor: Avoid the places where Milwaukee scab beer is kept on tap, and drink none but good, genuine union beer.

In the name of Brewers' Union, No. 60.
